RIVET HAS ANOTHER DAY DELAY

Napoleon J. Rivet, condemned to die this week in the electric chair as the murderer of Joseph J. Gallour of Lowell, will go his doom protesting his innocence. Even if the condemned man is living in hope something will yet intervene to save

If not, he says, he will die as a h .e man.

This was revealed to-day by Rivet's sister, Mrs. Gilbault of Cheever street, Lowell. Mrs. Gilbault, Rivet's aged father, mother, brother and two sisters from Canada visited him at his cell in Charlestown State Prison yesterday, and to them he said he was not guilty, that he still had hope of life, or, that failing, he would die like a man.

Because of the inability of some of the legal witnesses to attend, the execution of Rivet was again postponed. The second delay makes the case an unusual one in the history of Charlestown State Prison. Of the nine executions which have taken place at the prison, none occurred later in the week than Tuesday morning. Rivet will probably be electrocuted on morrow morning, between midnight and sunrise, but the execution may possibly be put off until Friday morning.

Rivet has not changed in the least. His unvarying coolness and lack of emotion characterized him to-day. At times the nerve he posses so simply remarkable. He is the most collected and unemotional prisoner ever in a cell at Charlestown. It was said to-day that he is gaining weight. This is the result of the steady diet of morning food which is given him. He eats the best. Anything that he desires to have served is brought to the death cell.

A reason for the postponement other than the absence of witnesses required by law to attend is that many of the prison guard who will be needed to guard the institution from the throng of inquisitive sightseers were on the annual outing of the Massachusetts State Prison Association.

Quite a crowd gathered around the prison this morning, and did not disperse for some time.

Rivet woke early to-day, ate a hearty breakfast, and talked with Rev. Father Augustine D. Malley, Catholic chaplain of the prison.

JOHNSON WILL FIGHT LANGFORD

CHICAGO, July 27.—Jack Johnson, champion of the world, has been secretly matched to meet Sam Langford in England, and will sail for the other side in a short time.

This is the information given out by Johnson's brother in this city, telegrams from the champion outlining his plans having been received within the last twenty-four hours.

The first message received by the brother advised him that Jack was going to Europe and would sail within a short time. He intends, he said, in his wire, to return to Chicago first and wanted everything put in ship shape, so that he would not have to spend much time here packing. Another wire was to the effect that Jack had arranged a match in London with Sam Langford, and that he expected the date would be August 25. For that reason he wished to wind up all of his theatrical time in this country and act only at once.

It is known here that Joe Woodman, Langford's manager, has been making every possible effort to get on a meeting with the other black man.

RED SOX FIGHT FOR TWO GAMES

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, July 27.—The fight for second place in the American League race reached an acute stage this afternoon when the Red Sox took the field against the New York Highlanders.

When the first game began the Speed Boys had a lead of two games over their rivals—that is to say the New Yorkers would have to win both games of the double-header to get back into second place, from which perch the Boston's had only in the last few days knocked them.

There was an early rush to the yard, for everybody knew there would be a jam. All the grand stand seats were sold by noon yesterday so it was a case of getting on hand early to get a seat of any kind. So it was that when the ticket sellers opened up for business long before the first game was scheduled to begin there was a long line of fans waiting to buy the little bits of pasteboard which would admit them to the grounds.

There was a scramble for the best seats. The fifty-cent pavilion, which is shielded from the sun, was filled up first, and then the overflow rushed to the fifty cent seats behind first base. The choice bleacher seats beyond the outfield were also quickly taken.

Field Roped In.

Ropes were strung around the field ready for the overflow. The cars were packed from the noon hour on to long after the first game started. It is a fine day for baseball and a crowd for which Boston is famous turned out.

Taxicabs and private automobiles laden with passengers arrived in droves, and carriages, too, finally got a chance to do some business. But thousands "hoofed" it from Roxbury and nearby points. It was a regular, joyous baseball crowd ready to yell at the slightest provocation.

The Boston players were early on the field for a bit of preliminary limbering up before the New York contingent arrived on the scene. Every player was cheered as he showed himself. They took quite a long batting practice before there was any sign of a New York player, but finally the fourteen men Manager Stallings brought over from New York drove up to the grounds in carriages, and the Boston players yielded the diamond to them.

Highlanders Crippled.

The Highlanders came here in a crippled condition, but at that were able to place a very strong team in the field. They are without the services of Hal Chase, the captain and first baseman; Harry Wolter, their right fielder; Sweeney, their best catcher, and Frank Laporte, their best hitting third sacker. Jack Knight, too, was very lame, but able to play first base in place of Chase.

The Red Sox were confident and the rooters behind them were sure the home team would trim the Highlanders. Winning doubleheaders is not an easy thing to do at any time, but our boys felt that with their own pitchers going right and their own bats connecting with the ball at the right time they would be able to walk away with both games. They knew they were up against a strong team and they went after the visitors from the sound of the gong.

Losing three out of four games to the Tigers immediately after the Red Sox had beaten Detroit four out of five was not to the kind of medicine calculated to improve dearth of pickers.

ENGLAND MUM ON CHINESE RELATIONS

LONDON, July 27.—England has barred all reference to its diplomatic relations with China at the international conference at the Hague. Announcement to this effect was made in the House of Commons when Under Secretary for India Montague stated that the United States had invited Great Britain to participate in a conference on the question of restricting the opium traffic. The Government is still considering the invitation.

MILK RATE HEARING TO BE HELD HERE

The Interstate Commerce Commission has announced that it will detail one of its special examiners to sit in Boston on August 16 to hear testimony in the milk rate cases. Upon this testimony the commission will determine whether or not the proposed advance on the part of the New England lines carrying this product are reasonable. The burden of proof will be on the carriers. This is provided for under the new law. Shippers, however, may be present at the hearing, either in person or by counsel, and cross-examine the witnesses whom the railroads will put on the stand. The hearings are expected to last a week.

NOBODY WANTS TO PICK CRANBERRIES

HARWICH, July 27.—Cranberry growers are facing a serious problem. Help to gather the berries cannot be found. It has been pronounced dangerous to health to work on the bogs. Especially is this true with reference to women. The process of harvesting creates a continuous cloud of dust which the picker inhales. Local health boards all through the cape have pronounced this injurious to health and consequently there is a

NEW YORKERS HANDICAPPED IN BIG SERIES

By Allen Sangree.

Correspondent New York Evening Journal traveling with the New York team. Mr. Sangree sent the following dispatch to his newspaper this afternoon:

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, July 27.—One might have thought the American League pennant at stake this afternoon when Red Sox met the Yanks in a double-header. Every seat on the huge grand stand had been sold hours before the battle. It was reckoned that the crowd would outnumber that which gathered to see the recent contest with Detroit, when something over 30,000 folks looked on.

It was a most inopportune engagement, so far as New York was concerned. Stallings thought that "Patsy" Donovan, to say the least, was guilty of an infringement of professional courtesy in that he arranged this dual contest on the first day here. Furthermore, Donovan failed to notify Stallings of said arrangement, and it was not until the club arrived in Boston this morning that the New York manager knew of the double-header. Stallings said it was within his right to protest the first game, but he will not do so. Mind you, fans, this event was a big money proposition. No protest.

New Yorkers Handicapped.

Never did a club essay to do battle under more handicap. Arriving at their hotel at Cleveland, Sunday, the Yanks left New York with the meagre complement of fourteen men, a bush league number. Chase came to the station with his uniform and grip, but when about to board the train he was taken with a fainting spell and had to be transported home in a cab. He believes that he is suffering with malignant sun-stroke.

That's No. 1 on the Red Cross Wagon. Laporte is out of commission with a wrenched tendon on his throwing arm. Vaughn, ditto. The club home office cannot get a correct diagnosis on this arm. He expects to find the kink shortly and give hope that Vaughn will join the club at Cleveland. Another cripple is Wolter, who is to-day under treatment in New York with some expert homeopath. Wolter busted a finger yesterday trying to cop Cobb's drive that won the game. He also expects to join the club in Cleveland. And Ed. Sweeney is home at Chicago with a bruised finger. None of these men will take part in this series. Quinn was expected to arrive in time to pitch one of the games this afternoon. He has been home at the bedside of a dying relative.

HARDING IS NAMED IN OHIO

COLUMBUS, O., July 27.—Warren G. Harding of Marion, former Lieutenant-Governor, was nominated for Governor by the Republican state Convention here to-day, on the third ballot.

The result of the first ballot was: Harding, 495; Brown, 413; Garfield, 75; Longworth, 92; and Denman, 2. Necessary to a choice, 553.

Second ballot—Harding, 497; Brown, 363; Garfield, 38; Longworth, 164; Forsker, 4.

Third ballot was: Harding, 746; Brown, 130; Longworth, 195; Garfield, 55.

The nomination was made unanimous. When he saw Judge Brown's cause hopeless, Cox, on the 3rd ballot, turned the ninety-one in his control over to Harding. The nomination of Harding is a complete victory for the Taft element.

Despite all predictions the name of Garfield was not presented to the convention. Neither was that of Carmi A. Thompson. Garfield would not stand on a conservative platform. Only two names were offered. They were those of Warren G. Harding, ex-Lieutenant-Governor, and Judge O. B. Brown. Harding was supposed to have the support of the Foraker-Taft forces while Brown was favored by the Cox men.

The platform was adopted without any opposition from Garfield or his followers. The name of Harding was presented by Congressman Grant Mosier and that of Judge Brown by Robert Nevin of Dayton.

Praise for Taft and Tariff.

The platform adopted by the convention contains a complete endorsement of the administration of President Taft, together with a defense of the Payne tariff law. It is in part as follows:

"We, the Republicans of Ohio, in State convention assembled, commend in the highest terms the splendid administration of William H. Taft, are proud of the results he has already achieved in his seventeen months in office and pledge him our hearty and united support in his further efforts as Chief Executive of the nation. We reiterate our loyal support given him in 1908, and endorse him for renomination in 1912.

"Recognizing the many accomplishments of prevent arbitrary increases in railroad freight rates.

"Prosecution and conviction of those implicated in the sugar frauds against the Government, and other violations of Federal statutes.

"Effective enforcements of the law against illegal dealing in stocks.

"Indictment of those involved in the cotton pool frauds, to the raise in the price of the necessities of life in every American family.

"Impartial enforcement of the anti-trust laws.

Government Expenses Reduced.

"Substantial reduction in government expenses, saving a million dollars a month in the Postoffice Department, with a fair promise of wiping out the annual postal deficit.

"Such remarkable progress in the construction of the Panama Canal as insures its early completion.

"Withdrawal from private entry, in order to preserve for the public benefit valuable coal and other mineral deposits, timber lands and water power sites of over 71,000,000 acres of the public domain.

"It our pleasure to raise the price of our foreign nations and has treated with vigor and wisdom important and delicate international problems. It is dealt justly and liberally with our dependencies.

"The record of achievement of this administration and the Sixty-first Congress is unequalled in our history and guarantees faithful adherence to all the pledges of the last Republican national platform.

"The tariff has been revised in accordance with the Republican doctrine, protecting home industries and American labor. It did not raise the rate of duty on a single common food product. The increases made were on luxuries and articles of ordinary use. It affords no more than adequate protection to the industries of the nation and is fair alike to consumers, laborers and producers. No tariff bill was ever more unjustly assailed."

JUDGE REBUKED FOR USING OFFICE

NEW YORK, July 27.—Comptroller Prendergast rebuked Judge Warren Foster of the Court of General Sessions for allowing his chambers to be used as a "private law office." The comptroller describes it The comptroller wrote him in part:

"Facts which been disclosed relate to the use of your chambers in the Criminal Court building as a private law office, during your attendance upon the court. The question directly raised by those facts is whether you can draw your salary which is fixed by law at $1,800 per annum, can be properly audited and paid by this department.

JOHNSON BARRED FROM MOTOR TRACK

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 27.—Several days ago Jack Johnson made application to enter his racing car in the September races at the Indianapolis motor speedway. When the management refused to consider the application Johnson's representatives asked that he be permitted to give an exhibition drive. C. G. Fisher, president of the Speedway Company, announces that Johnson will not be allowed to give the exhibition. No reasons assigned, but it is understood that the white speeders objected to the presence of "a nigger thumper" on the track.

FREMEN HURT; $15,000 LOSS AT CHURCH

One fireman was struck in the head and badly hurt by falling timber, and others were overcome by smoke in fighting a fire that started in the belfry of the Third Congregational-Unitarian Church, at Austin and Norfolk streets, Cambridge, at 10:30 o'clock toi-day. The damage will be between $12.000 and $15,000.

ALL FIREMEN IN CAMBRIDGE RESPOND.

So rapidly did the flames spread in the upper part of the wooden structure that it was necessary to send in two alarms. Nearly all of the firemen of Cambridge were thus brought to the scene. When the tall water tower was raised and a great stream of water was hurled into the flames they were soon got under control.

The injured fireman was Charles Cutting, hoseman of Engine Company No. 2. He was cut in the head by a falling rafter. He was removed to the Cambridge Relief Hospital.

Firemen who were overcome by the smoke and intense heat were carried to places of safety and revived.

The church, which is located in the heart of a thickly populated residential section, was undergoing repairs, while its pastor, the Rev. Meary Hallam Sanderson, is in Europe.

Flame Shoots from Belfry.

A force of painters were at work inside of the structure and some masters were busy on the roof. All at once a tongue of flame shot out of the tall belfry. It soon wrapped itself about the towering part of the building and was fanned by a brisk breeze.

The slaters made haste to get off the roof, and the painters ran out of the building. As soon as the first firemen reached the scene they saw that a second alarm would be necessary to save the building.

One of those in the church at the time the fire started was F. M. Buffum, the sexton. He helped to carry some of the church belongings to places of safety while the firemen were fighting the blaze.

The damage it was estimated would reach from $10,000 to $15,000. The church had just expended $2,700 in repairs that went up in smoke and there was little left standing except the walls.

Injured Firemen Delirious.

While Cutting was on the way to the hospital he became delirious and made an attempt to leap out of the ambulance. It was necessary for the doctor to hold him.

Ladderman Walter Allen was overcome in the church and fell unconscious. He was almost gone when some of his brother firemen dragged him out of the structure. Dr. Hayes of the Fire Department treated the man and he was taken home.

While on the way to the fire Ladder Truck No. 1 ran down Martha Hendrickson, eight years old, of No. 1039 Austin street, the horses trampling the little girl. She was cut and bruised severely, but her life was saved by the wheels of the big machine missing her. She was taken to the Cambridge Relief Hospital.

Truck No. 1 was driven by Jack McPherson, and his horses went over the little girl when he made a sharp turn into Austin street. She ran directly in front of the horses and the driver could not save her.

The spire of the church burned long after the blaze in other parts of the building were extinguished. A big crowd was attracted to the scene.

Hoseman Overcome.

When the fire was well under wa Hoseman Cornelius Crowley of Cher l was overcome by smoke and w ried from the edifice. He wa by E. physician and recovered

CIVIL WAR IN SPAIN; 50,000 TROOPS READY

MADRID, July 27.—With Spain riven by industrial war and the revolutionary situation acute, fighting broke out to-day at several points between Republicans and Clericals, the troops taking a hand.

Many are reported injured, for the most part in Catalonia, particularly Barcelona.

Bilbao was also a centre of disorder.

The anniversary of the declaration of the Spanish republic in 1873 coming to-day, with the excitement over the first anniversary of the Ferrer execution, has caused great alarm to the conservative and governmental classes.

The Clericals are farther inflamed by the crisis between Premier Canalejas and King Alfonso and the Vatican.

It was reported to-day that the government was prepared to order the first reserve, composed of citizens who have served their time in the army, to prepare for action, supplementing the regular army.

Republicans in many towns and cities, defying the authorities, held demonstrations to-day, most of them of an extremely radical character.

General Weyler of Cuban war fame, now captain-general of Catalonia, had 30,000 troops in readiness for action in and about Barcelona. Many Anarchists were arrested there.

Individual clashes were reported in the dispatches received early in the day, and by noon it was estimated that the total number of injured was more than 100.

Services were held over the grave of Castellar, leader of the ill fated republic of 1873.

BOSTON FIRST CITY TO STOP FIGHT VIEWS

Boston was the first city in the country to prohibit the exhibition of pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson prize fight which is now being displayed throughout the country as one of the most degrading and brutal spectacles the nation ever tolerated. Chicago is second in the list.

Mayor Fitzgerald let it be known today that when licenses are issued next week for the coming theatrical year they will be given with the express understanding that there shall be no prize fight pictures shown.

Under Section 404 of the Acts of 1908, the Mayor is given the power to issue licenses to places of entertainment such as theatres, "under such terms as he deems reasonable."

Mayor Warns Managers.

Acting upon this authority the Mayor made it a condition that all those who held amusement licenses granted by him must not permit the exhibition of the fight pictures, and it was recalled today that the following circular letter was sent three days after the Reno fight to all licensees:

July 7, 1910.

You are hereby notified that the following further condition is imposed by me upon the entertainment license held by you. The licensee shall not permit the exhibition of moving pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson fight recently held at Reno, Nev.

JOHN F. FITZGERALD, Mayor.

The lawmakers of New England are practically solid against prize fighting in this country and will be leading figures in a fight of such contents, as is shown by the eagerness with which they are enrolling themselves as members of the National League of Lawmakers to Stop Prize Fighting.

The replies of the lawmakers to a letter from William Hard, Jr., Soviet and Secretary, to become members of the organization absence from the matter, which is being taken up throughout the country generally, has already been deeply considered in the New England States and that, so far as this section of the country is concerned, America has seen the last prize fight.

Maine Lawmakers in Line.

Many of the letters received today were from officials of Maine. Extracts from some of them follow:

GEORGE R. FULLER, Southwest Harbor, Me.—I am in favor of a move in this State to stop prize fighting.

W. A. HOOKER, Eastport, Me.—I feel that the only boxing should be amateur, too brutalizing in its results, and fraught with danger to the health. Count me with you from start to finish.

A. H. NICKERSON, East Corinth, Me.—I am with you in this matter. Prize fighting is a disgrace to civilization.

T. W. PEMBLE, Tremont, Me.—I have always defended prize fighting as a means to some end, such as to test the relative merits of rowing and athletic contests, or a bout between college athletes or fowls. I consider the fight between the white and black men as refreshing to the moral standing of America.

E. J. LITTLEFIELD, Dexter, Me.—Please put me on record as being against those scientific prize fights.

DR. CROSBY A. PERRY, Readsboro, Vt.—I am sure you are glad to add my name to the anti-prize fighting league.

Sawtelle the Pictures!

LAMBERT H. CARPENTER, Manchester, N. H.—I don't know much about prize fighting, clean bouts, but those big prize fights are so brutal that pictures of them should be prohibited.

MARTIN TARADAY, Bennett, Me.—I shall be all I can in helping to stop it.

H. B. LOUGLIN, Belfast, Me.—If I could drop a hint or add a word that would stop prize fighting I would gladly do it. It has no redeeming qualities whatever.

CHARLES F. CLARK, Pownal, Vt.—I shall be pleased to help in any way to create influence against anything so debasing as prize fighting.

E. B. PALMER, Bristol, Vt.—You have not only my sincere good wishes but my cooperation as well. Let the good work go forward until every vestige of the evil is purged of the evil and pernicious influences and fistic possibilities then may follow.

F. H. SISSELL, Gardiner, Me.—Prize fighting is a cruel and brutal sport and should not be tolerated by the American people.

TORQUAY, England, July 27.—Graham White made a spectacular aeroplane flight today over the British war fleet as it left Torquay for a short holiday. King George V was always delighted at the flights and joined in the cheers for the aviator.

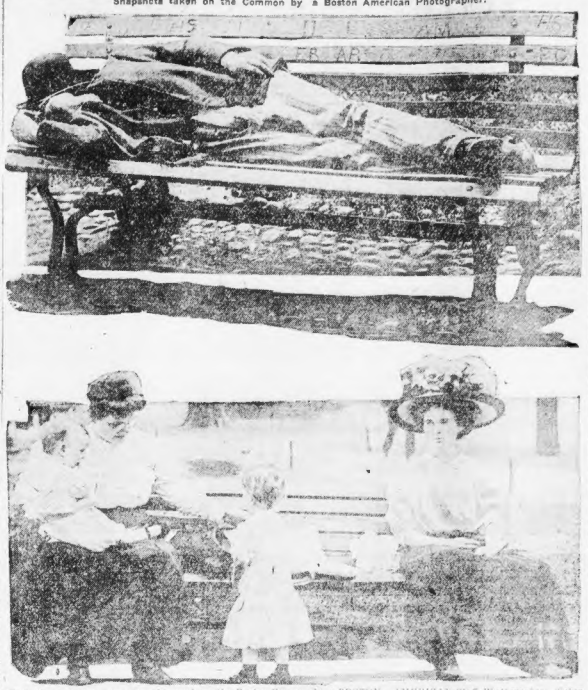
COTTON MILLS TO CLOSE.

ST. JOHN, N. B., July 27.—The Cornwall and York cotton mills here will be closed next Saturday until August 8.

WHICH SHOULD ENJOY THE PRIVILEGES OF THE COMMON?

Snapshots taken on the Common by a Boston American Photographer.



Both these pictures are snapshots made on the Boston Common by a BOSTON AMERICAN Staff Photographer. Taken one look at them and ask yourself if Mr. O'Meara should allow the man in the top picture to monopolize the park benches to the exclusion of women and children.

BALLOON AFTER BOSTON CUP

PITTSFIELD, July 27.—William Van Sleet of Pittsfield, and Alton Farrell, a young resident of Ansonia, Ct., are trying to make their way to Boston today in the balloon Springfield, from Ode Hill, N. H. It is Van Sleet's sixty-fourth flight while Mr. Farrell is having his first experience in riding above the clouds.

The getaway was at 2:30 a. m. The Springfield rose straight up and high in the air when she drifted slowly to the West. Then, catching a higher breeze she began to travel Southeast by East. It was Van Sleet's intention to try to capture one of the Boston cups, if possible, and he intend to get as close to the sea as he can.

QUINCY YACHT CLUB HOLDS LADIES' DAY

Today was annual Ladies' Day at the Quincy Yacht club, in Quincy. A grand review of all the yachts took place from the club house at 3 o'clock. As an accommodation to the guests special cars are in service, via additional trips of the electrics, Hingham Nook and Wharf, and many amenities. The club house will remain open until late tonight.

MILLION LOST IN ITALY.

ROME, July 25.—Violent storms continue to lash northern Italy. More than one million dollars' damage to crops has been done in the last forty-eight hours.

Women and Children Now Driven Away from Boston Common by Absence of Police.

The BOSTON AMERICAN to-day presents two pictures taken on Boston Common yesterday. They will serve to illustrate the situation simply that even a child can understand it.

In one of the pictures there is shown a man stretched at full length on a bench. The man is asleep. He is pretty well dressed and is apparently not a bum. The man is without doubt drunk.

While there is nothing in the picture that would show conclusively that the man is drunk, those who saw him at close quarters as he lay there were confirmed from the condition of his clothing that he was drunk.

The drunken sleeper attracted much attention. Young boys approached the bench, laughed at the man, sometimes poked him and then ran away chuckling.

Two boys are shown in the picture as they were found by the photographer. Little girls passed, now the revolting spectacle and hurried on.

Some cried:

"Oh, look at the drunken man!"

Then they hurried on with fright depicted in their faces.

The man had an entire bench. He was demoralizing to the young boys who saw him. He was repugnant to others who wished to make use of the park for what it was intended.

The Other Picture.

Now take a look at the other picture. Two women and two small children. The weather was intolerably hot when this picture was taken and about the only comfortable place in the heart of the city was the Common.

Women and small children were the chief sufferers. These two women sought the Common for rest, to cool off and to give the little ones a breath of fresh air. The two women and the two children take the only bench that is apparently available. A common custom in the resting benches. Now, Mr. Commissioner O'Meara, this newspaper, with much respect, asks you to forget the difference that you authorities failed up as embracing you in the Boston Common, and then answer the simple question that is presented in these two pictures.

Is Boston Common for the drunken man who is down and out, or for women and children?

This is not a rabbit question. It is not down. It is not intricate. A glance at the pictures and they answer their own interrogation.

All the argument advanced in protest against the bench ordinance is met by the question: Will you please explain to the Common now as that it can be enjoyed by decent people as well as not?

Mr. O'Meara has seen things from a number of standpoints since the Common has been under his charge. He has been one of the noted New Yorker, who said: "This is a free country, he can't arrest me for being drunk, rude and offensive people had a right to be on the Common.

Then he got another viewpoint of the matter and found Mayor Fitzgerald, who began the agitation for improvement, with the opposite view to that he started with.

Then he wielded about to another point of view and found that he could take the place of Joe M. Friedman. This is the Mayor's second appointment for this office, which carries no salary.

But Mr. O'Meara, as did Mayor Fitzgerald, put his name failed to get by the Civil Service Board.

Protest Is Against the Disorderly.

Remember, no one is saying a word against poor people enjoying the Common, or against unfortunate people of any kind who do not attempt to annoy say one being there. But the people of the city do protest against those who are drunk, who are disorderly and who are criminal in their actions making out of the Common their stamping ground to the annoyance or exclusion of others.

Mr. O'Meara has seen things from a number of standpoints since the Common has been under his charge. He has been one of the noted New Yorker, who said: "This is a free country, he can't arrest me for being drunk, rude and offensive people had a right to be on the Common.

But Mr. O'Meara, as did Mayor Fitzgerald, put his name failed to get by the Civil Service Board.

YAFFE NAMED FOR CHILDREN'S BOARD

Mayor Fitzgerald today appointed Abram Yaffe of No. 40 Allerton street, in Ward 9, a Children's Institution Commissioner, the name has been sent to the Civil Service Commission for approval. Mr. Yaffe is a young man. He is a prominent anti-Democrat Democrat in his ward. If approved by the commission he will take the place of Lee M. Friedman. This is the Mayor's second appointment for this office, which carries no salary.

But Mr. Yaffe, as did Mr. Friedman, put his name failed to get by the Civil Service Board.

COLE, RUSSELL WITNESS, MAKES BRIBE CHARGE

William J. Cole of Dover, Col., who is registered at the Revere House in Bowdoin Square and whose name was mentioned in the famous Daniel Russell will fight, was approached with a proposition to impersonate Daniel Blake Russell, according to statements Dakota Dan" Russell, claimant No. 1, and employes of the Revere House say Cole made to them.

"Dakota Dan" declares Cole said he had been offered $10,000 by a person he did not name if he would assume the role of Daniel Blake Russell and fight for a portion of the estate of the late Daniel Russell of Melrose. That Cole made these and other statements to Dakota Dan is vouched for by Fred Hathaway, manager of the billiard room at the Revere House, and by S. C. Murphy, a waiter at the hotel.

The arrival of Cole and the disclosures he is said to have made created a sensation among "Dakota Dan's" friends. Interest in the Russell will case was revived today. Dakota Dan has wired his attorney, Senator Leslie Simpson to hasten to Boston.

Cole is a native of Dover, N. H., who got into the Russell case through the attempted identification of pictures of Fresno Dan as pictures of Cole. Three members of the Russell family, Edward Brown, a Boston lawyer, Frank Stevens, real estate manager of the film of a Boston newspaper, and Fred Morey of Everett—identified the pictures of Cole, who went to school with them.

Cole, when questioned, gives his name at that time has caused him and his relatives trouble and vexation.

In telling his story Cole told how Dakota Dan visited he had been introduced to Cole by Atty. Anderson of New York, a regular guest at the Revere House.

"I was sitting in the cafe one night at dinner," said Dakota Dan, "Who had a drink, and Cole took me a drink that startled me. I never saw Cole before, and don't know anything about him. However, he said that he was approached by a person—he would not tell me who—while he was in California months ago, who asked him to come to Boston and impersonate the youngest brother of William J. Russell and he became a claimant for my share in the estate of my father, Daniel Russell of Melrose.

"He said that he met the authors of this proposition in Chicago, and that they showed him a file of letters and documents illustrating the manner by holding the two hands several inches apart. Cole told me that he met the authors of the proposition. 'I can't go through with this matter,' I told him, 'as I am well known in New England. I was born in Dover, N. H., and would be immediately identified.'

"Cole said he was told that it would be all right for him to impersonate Daniel Blake Russell, because the real school was killed in the San Francisco earthquake. Cole explained to me that he had been killed in the earthquake, and that he had been killed in the earthquake, and that he had been killed in the earthquake.

"He said he wished he had been killed. He told me that he had been proffered $10,000 for his share in the scheme if he would go through with it.

"Cole, when seen refused to discuss his statements concerning "Dakota Dan" further than to say he declined to talk "about this Fresno Dan business, but before I go home I'll make some people hot."

He continued:

"My name is William J. Cole, it always has been and always will be. They have got a lot to answer for, calling me 'Fresno Dan.' I am not 'Fresno Dan.' I never was and I never will be. The real Daniel Blake Russell and I hope he gets what belongs to him. He is not 'Fresno Dan.'"

Cole told Dakota Dan he knew he was the real Daniel Blake Russell.

CUBAN REBELS ARM NEGROES IN BIG UPRISING

HAVANA, July 27.—The rebel leaders, hiding in the hills of Santiago province, are arming the negroes, according to advices received here to-day.

Though the government continues to profess no anxiety over the uprising, the public is uneasy. It is now believed that the insurgents have a strong force in hill retreats, and that the small body that showed itself near El Caney under General Miniet is but a fraction of the real force.

President Gomez held another council of war at the palace to-day.

Reports reached Havana to-day to the effect that revenue cutters had searched a schooner off the coast of Oriente province, where the government is exercising unusual vigilance to prevent the landing of an expedition thought to have sailed from Mexico.

With the rurales and the regulars pursuing Miniet's force through the hills, fighting is believed to be imminent.

While the authorities are endeavoring to belittle the revolutionary movement, the activity of the Cuban Government is proof that the trouble is far more serious than they care to have known, and it is straining every resource to prevent its spread throughout the island.

For days the plans of the revolutionists have been gradually nearing completion, for open hostilities came before anticipated.

CRIPPEN SHIP ENTERS STRAITS OF BELLE ISLE

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., July 27.—The steamer Montrose, believed to have on board Dr. H. H. Crippen and Ethel Clare LeNeve, entered the straits of Belle Isle to-day and is headed for Rimouski, where the couple probably will be arrested.

Warrant Issued for Arrest.

QUEBEC, July 27.—A warrant for the arrest of Dr. H. H. Crippen, wanted in London in connection with the murder of his wife, Belle Elmore, was to-day placed in the hands of Chief Constable Gauvreau, representative of the Dominion police at Rimouski. By this move, the final preparations were made for the trap into which it is expected Crippen will walk on Sunday.

Under direction of Commissioner Sherwood of the Dominion police, the police exerted every effort to-day to get him wireless communication with the steamer Montrose, on which the American dentist is believed to be a passenger in disguise, accompanied by Ethel Clair LeNeve, his stenographer.

It is possible that the arrest will not be made until the vessel is almost at Quebec, though the officers will board her at Father Point. He will act the part of an assistant to the pilot, according to the understanding governing here in police circles.

NEW TREATMENT FOR DEAFNESS

In the treatment of thousands of cases of catarrh the Osmo-Chemic physicians noticed that many of their patients complained of dullness of hearing, with head noises of different kinds. On investigation they found that catarrhal affections of deafness, head noises, ringing ears and dullness of hearing were due to an extension of the catarrhal process along the mucous membrane of the throat, up the Eustachian tube into the middle ear. In the same way the ear becomes diseased and the hearing affected from the extension of sore throat from scarlet fever, diphtheria, measles and typhoid fever, and this condition is as distinctly curable as deafness from catarrh of the head and throat. In fact, under the Osmo-Chemic treatment all conditions of deafness, except those where the drum of the ear is totally destroyed, are curable.

Age and duration of disease is no detriment to cure. In one case the patient had passed seventy years and where the deafness had existed for more than fifty years he was cured.

The Osmo-Chemic Catarrh treatment, supplemented by the Osmo-Chemic Hearing Drum, together a certain cure for all forms of deafness. Call at the offices, Room 18, 18 Boylston St., or write for free booklet and question blank. Deafness of any kind may have built so much low song you have failed to hear, music is made plainer, you have lost you that your hearing could not be restored, the Osmo-Chemic Hearing Drum will restore your hearing. The Osmo-Chemic Electric Vibrator has been perfected for the treatment of deafness and head noises. Not only restored the sense of sound but restored the hearing to acute as before disease had attacked the ears.

GRAND TRUNK TRAIN DITCHED

SOUTH BEND, Ind., July 27.—Mob attacks on a freight train ending with the ditching of the entire train of six cars and an unsuccessful effort to kidnap the non-union members of the crew were the chief happenings of the last twenty-four hours in the strike on the Grand Trunk railroad.

The wrecking of the freight train was forecasted by the strike sympathizers when the half dozen cars heavily loaded with emergency freight and under a heavy guard of special officers left South Bend. At Kingsbury, the train was met near the station by a big mob of sympathetic friends of the strikers who derailed the cars and rolled all into the ditch along the right of way.

BRYAN'S DEFEAT OVERWHELMING

GRAND ISLAND, Neb., July 27.—William Jennings Bryan, thrice the national standard bearer of the Democratic party, was overwhelmingly defeated in the State convention early to-day when, by a vote of 647 to 108, the delegates defeated his county option plank.

The vote came after an impassioned speech by Mr. Bryan on the floor of the convention. He was cheered by his supporters, but the volume of sound by them was small as compared with the mighty cheer that followed the announcement of the vote that took the leadership of his party in Nebraska away from Bryan.

The platform adopted endorses the administration of Governor Shallenberger and favors the giving to metropolitan cities and cities of the first class the right to make their own charters.

ICE CREAM MAKER DIES OF HEAT

PITTSBURG, July 27.—George Rosso was scalded to death in an ice cream factory on Forbes street. He was at work in a pit beneath a boiler when a steam tube burst.

WOMAN BREAKS 'HURRY' RECORD

Mrs. John Dunker of Everett, who is to-day rushing across the Atlantic to her dying mother, holds the "hurry up" record for getting ready for such a trip. It took her just twelve minutes.

Dunker hired a taxicab in this city, procured two new trunks and some new dresses for his wife, sped out to Everett, found Mrs. Dunker doing housework, had her in the taxi on the way to the White Star steamer Zeeland at Charlestown within twelve minutes of his arrival home, and got her and her baggage on board just as the gangplank was being removed.

Mr. Dunker, who works in a local department store, received a cablegram at 9 a. m. requesting that his wife start at once for London. He first telegraphed to Chicago for a money order, then ascertained that the Zeeland was to sail at noon and engaged passage by telephone. At 10:10 he received his money order, sent two boys to buy trunks and a third to buy clothing for his wife, then flew to the telegraph office and collected the money on his order, jumped into a taxicab, picked up the trunks and his wife's suits and carried out the rest of the itinerary already described.

HOW TO KEEP THE BABY WELL IN HOT WEATHER

Give the baby only good milk, prepared exactly as the doctor directs.

Keep the milk always cold and covered.

Do not ask your neighbor's advice about feeding; ask your doctor.

Remove most of the baby's clothing. A thin, loose, cotton shirt, without sleeves, is enough.

Give the baby a sponge bath several times a day.

Give the baby fresh air day and night. Keep the windows open.

Let the baby sleep alone.

Give the baby two or three teaspoonfuls of cool, boiled water several times a day.

Make use of ferry boats, recreation piers, vacation schools, parks and roofs.

It isn't what you pay for advertising; it's what advertising pays you. Advertising that pays is the only cheap advertising; advertising that doesn't pay is dear at any price. Advertising in the AMERICAN pays best, therefore it is the cheapest.

ROBBED OF $600 ON ESPLANADE

Henry De Hews of No. 34 Orange street, Manchester, N. H., has complained to the police that he was lured to the Charles River Basin Esplanade opposite the Union Boat Club and there assaulted and robbed of $600. The thieves escaped.

The police have not been able to find any body who witnessed the robbery.

De Hews says he met two strangers who volunteered to show him about the town.

Opposite the Union Boat Club, according to his story, one of the men hit him on the jaw. He fell to the ground dazed and in an instant the other men removed the pocketbook containing $600 from his pocket.

There were no marks on De Hews's face that would indicate that he had been assaulted.

De Hews describes one of the men as being six feet in height, weighing 170 pounds.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 200,000 more than its next highest competitor and 75,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined. Circulation books of the AMERICAN open to all.

SEE BLACK HAND PLOT IN BOMBS

NEW YORK, July 27.—Bitterness engendered among members of the Black Hand Society and the lawless element because of the unrelenting activity of the police is attributed to-day as the motive for the placing of four bombs around the Mercer Street Police Station of sufficient explosive character, it is believed, to have wrecked the building and to have killed the fifty policemen and ten prisoners who were inside at the time.

The four bombs were sent early to-day to the bureau of combustibles at police headquarters where experts will examine them and make a report on their explosive qualities. Nine of the bombs which the police opened themselves after they had soaked in water were found to contain a large quantity of gun powder.

FIVE ARRESTED IN WEST END RIOTS

Five men, three of them sailors and the others civilians, were arrested in the West End early to-day following a riot of negroes. Not until almost an hour's gun fighting, nine of the latter broke order in the district.

Bricks and stones were thrown, razors drawn and clubs used by the rioters.

The trouble started when Patrolman Thomas Foley tried to arrest a number of colored sailors.

WRECKAGE SOLVES HARBOR MYSTERY

The wreckage that the grapples of the United States cable steamer Joseph Henry caught up off Nix's Mate solved a mystery of years' standing, and disclosed the fate of the towboat Bettie B. The Bettie B. left her berth eighteen years ago and proceeded down the harbor. She was not heard from again. The stern of the towboat with the propeller and shafting intact was brought to the surface.

NEW SHIP LINE FROM BOSTON TO ISTHMUS

President Andrew W. Preston of the United Fruit Company announced today that a new line of steamers for both passenger and freight service would be put into operation next Summer by the company between Boston and Panama and Colombia, thus supplying the rapidly-growing passenger business between this port and the Isthmus district with accommodations to obtain which travelers at present must journey to New York.

A contract has been signed with Workman, Clarke & Co., shipbuilders of Belfast, Ireland, for three magnificent 5,000-ton refrigerator ships, with a capacity for 150 saloon passengers, and 25,000 steam of laundry. This will be double the capacity of the present line to Costa Rica, comprising the Limon, Esparta and other vessels, and more than double the capacity of the Boston and Jamaica line, on which the Admiral Dewey plies. The contract calls for the completion of all three of the vessels within a year, the first to be completed next May, the other two to be delivered within two months following.

All the saloons and staterooms on the new vessels will be cooled in the southern zones by refrigerating pipes, while in the northern latitudes heat will be supplied by electricity. Every possible modern comfort and accommodation will be supplied for the tourist, and this line should fill a long-felt want for passengers between this port and Panama and Colombia.

Only three other Sunday papers in the entire United States equal the circulation of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. Circulation books of the SUNDAY AMERICAN open to all.

DOROTHY DIX SAYS SOCIETY WILL CAST OUT JILTED ROMEO

By DOROTHY DIX.

NEW YORK, July 26.—Shades of Launcelot, and Sir Percival, and Galahad, preserve us! What are we coming to when a young man sues a woman for breach of promise, and, in order to obtain money from her, gives out her love letters to the newspapers to publish?

It is enough to make a brazen image blush, to shrivel up all the romance in the world, and to cause Cupid to break his arrows across his knee, make a permanent assignment, and go out of business.

It is frequently said that the age of chivalry is dead, but one never gets a line on how very, very dead, how deader than a nail in a coffin it is, until one hears of an affair like that of Russell Griswold and Miss Helen Woodruff Smith of Stamford, and realizes that there are those in the world in the shape of a man who are capable of cashing in a love episode at so much per vow, and kiss.

According to the story that is being unfolded in the daily papers by the astute Mr. Griswold, when he was a merry, laughing, glad-eyed high school boy, he attracted the attention of a wealthy woman who was much older than himself, and who was the victim of a misfit marriage. Miss Smith says that she regarded the boy merely as a protege, that he was bright, and talented, and amusing, and so she liked to have him about, as he entertained her and brightened the house, and that she gave him money and helped him in every way, financially and socially.

Griswold avers that Miss Smith fell in love with him, and that she promised to marry him when her father died, but that when her father did die, some months ago, and left her $2,000,000, she refused to marry him, derided his love as "puppy love" and cast him from her doors. Whereupon the gallant youth sues her for $50,000 damages, and to bolster up his case publishes broadcast the letters that she had written him.

They are amazingly good letters, bright, witty, humorous, gossipy, tender, affectionate—and exceedingly indiscreet. They are ornamented with clever little pen and ink sketches, and adorned with symbolic and cabalistic P.S. and signs that evidently stand for kisses. They are letters that you wouldn't enjoy seeing in print if you had happened to write them, but what they really show is that Miss Smith possesses the fatal gift of the ready letter writer, and that she let her pen run away with her.

She was evidently fond of the boy, and enjoyed the youthful ardor of his love-making. She trusted him, and never suspected that he would make her epistles public, as she shopped into them sentimental twaddle, as her sex all do, and as much as when they are put in hand, and compared front a quire or so of good letter paper. The moral of all which, so far as women are concerned seems to be writing for your dear eye hundred friends to sizzle over in the footlights.

"No Excuse for Caddish Act."

Whatever Miss Smith's folly, though, in writing love letters to a youth with whom she wasn't really in love and didn't intend to marry, it is no excuse for him for the unspeakably caddish act of making these letters public. There are some things he can't, without regard to the provocation, and one of the things one gentleman never does, under any circumstances is to betray a woman's confidence. The man who kisses and tells puts himself forever beyond the pale.

The unwritten law that obtains among all men of honor is that when a woman has bestowed her favor upon a man, and far from boasting of it, he is bound not only to keep silence concerning it, but if the occasion arises, to perjure himself like a gentleman to save her from criticism or remark.

How then shall we characterize the conduct of a man who for years has eaten at a woman's table, who has accepted her hospitality and enjoyed her bounty, and even taken money from her, who turned around and blazons her indiscretions to the winds, who publishes her love letters, and who gives out every kiss and every tender word for a fiendish public to hear at?

Was there ever such an exhibition of lack of taste, of lack of chivalry, or lack of even plain decency before? Is there a club that would accept such a man as a member? Is there a woman who wouldn't turn away in contempt and loathing at a man who played so little the part of a man?

To begin with, to sue a woman for breach of promise is certainly the limit of scrubbiness to which a man can descend. The woman who sues a man for breach of promise, and tries to make the man marry her who is tired of her, and doesn't want to marry her, is a creature from whom people of sensibility shudder away, but the man who hales the woman who is weary of him and refuses to marry him into court, and asks a jury to award him cold hard cash for the damages to his affections, is as abject an object as it is possible to conceive.

"Cupidity and Not Cupid."

There can be no money equivalent for a blighted love, and the wounds in the heart that can be healed by a positive of greenbacks are not with Cupid. It is cupidity and not Cupid that demands money of its lost love; so we need waste no tears upon the pathetic story of this avaricious Romeo who figured out that the nine years he put in worshipping at the shrine of a fickle fair one ought to amount to him in about $50,000, and court costs for collection.

Let us hope that Miss Smith will have the grit to fight the case out to the bitter end, as she has said that she would do. She need have no fear of a verdict, for American men are not yet lost to all sense of chivalry, and as long as there is one spark of gallantry left, the man who betrays a woman's confidence, who publishes her love letters, is going to get what is coming to him. He has committed the unpardonable offense against honor. He has kissed and told, and he is going to be cast out of society.

GRATEFUL MOTHER TELLS OF LITTLE SON'S SUFFERING

With Sores All Over Head, on Neck and Face. Cries Kept Parents Awake Through Long Nights. Hands in Gloves to Prevent Scratching. Used Cuticura Remedies. Cured in Less than Three Weeks.

As a grateful mother, I feel it my duty to thank you for the cure of my little son who was afflicted for about eight months with sores all over his head, back of his neck and nearly all his face. We tried all kinds of remedies without any relief. We even employed a good physician and I am sure he tried his very best to cure my poor suffering little boy. But, alas! instead of getting better he went for the worse. His head was literally covered with scabs and ugly sores and his cries kept us awake throughout the long night. I had to keep his hands in gloves to prevent his scratching his head, as he was doubtless suffering from a burning and itching sensation and was constantly trying to put his hands where it hurt.

At last when he was about three years old, we saw an advertisement of Cuticura and I decided to try the virtues of the Cuticura Remedies. I bought one cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent. I used them according to directions and I am happy to tell you the little sufferer was cured in less than three weeks. This was over a year ago and now his head is covered with a fine growth of luxuriant hair. Strange to say, all those unsightly sores did not even leave a scar.

FIND BOSTON MAN'S BODY IN THE SIERRAS

Word was received in Boston today from San Francisco that the mystery which has surrounded the disappearance of Kenneth Archbald, formerly of this city and heir to an estate of $75,000, left him by his father, the Rev. Andrew Archbald, had been cleared at last in the finding of bones, locks of hair, clothing, a watch and notebook identified as being all that remains of the well-known young man.

The gruesome discovery was made by members of the Sierra Club while returned from the King's river canyon. They found the remains of Archbald in a desolate spot twenty-three miles from Kanawyer cottage, and in the note-book with the remains bore the name of "Kenneth Archbald," scrawled upon it.

It was in 1908 that Archbald disappeared as completely as though the earth had swallowed him. Searching parties were sent out in many places in California, where he had gone, and the canyons and heights of the mountains were hunted over, for the missing man was a mature lover.

Not long before his disappearance his father, the Rev. Mr. Archbald, had died, leaving him sole heir to a fortune of $75,000.

The searching parties returned one by one to report utter failure in their quest for the wealthy Boston man.

He was declared dead by the courts about a year ago. Kenneth Archbald was well known here where he had lived for years. He was a graduate of Dartmouth College.

WELCH GETS PLACE OF FINNERAN

William J. Welch, formerly water commissioner of the city and for a long time connected with the Water Department, is to be appointed superintendent of the distribution division at a salary of $3,000. It is said the Civil Service Commission is willing to renew his rating for the supervisorship, which he formerly held. A place for Welch has been made by reducing George H. Finneran, who was appointed superintendent by Water Commissioner Hannan, to the position of chief clerk.

$25,000 LOSS IN CHAIR FACTORY FIRE

PRINCETON, July 27.—The large mill of the Temple, Stuart Chair Company, a three-story structure, situated in East Princeton, was wiped out by fire, fifty men being thrown out of employment. The loss footed up to $25,000. The cause of the fire is unknown. The high wind fed the flames to spread to the tenement house owned by Mrs. Mary A. Hardy, this structure being also consumed. It is said that the insurance on the chair plant will not exceed $7,000.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 200,000 more than its next highest competitor and 75,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

TO HEAR REPORTS ON TEMPERANCE PLANS

A meeting of the spiritual directors, presidents and secretaries of the forty-five subordinate branches of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of the archdiocese of Boston will be held this evening in Caverga Hall, No. 18 Harvard street, South End, to take action on the coming of the national body in this city the week of August 8. The chairmen of the sub-committees in charge of the arrangements for the convention and parade will submit reports. President John T. Sisti of Cambridge will preside.

TAFT BACK AT HOME AND GOLF TO-MORROW

BEVERLY, July 27.—President Taft and his family are expected home at Burgess Point to-morrow afternoon from their ten-day cruise in the Mayflower down the North Shore. Beverly to-day is tip-top with expectation and the town is wearing a reward air of gaiety and importance as the time for her distinguished Summer citizen's return draws near.

Since the President's departure the executive offices have been removed from the rooms occupied by the Board of Trade and are now established in the pretty Pickering cottage in Lathrop street. The clerks, as well as Secretary Norton will greatly appreciate the change, as the Pickering cottage is removed from the noise and bustle of the former offices which were near two busy street car lines.

The new offices are also nearer Burgess Point and it is quite possible that the President will himself visit them and transact some business there as they are in a quiet residential section and his coming and going could be private.

When the President returns here tomorrow it will be for a stay of not less than two weeks, when he will leave for a day to attend the dedication of the new Pilgrim monument and his family and party for Hopedale, Mrs. Taft, however, will remain a Summer home.

You see the AMERICAN everywhere—in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

HARPOON OFF TO WIN THIRD SONDER RACE

BOSTON YACHT CLUB'S STATION, Hull, July 27.—Two successive victories for the Harpoon, sailed by Charles P. Adams, 2d, in the races for the Quincy cup, in Hull Bay, made the challenger a strong favorite in to-day fourth race which was started off the Boston Yacht Club's house at 1 o'clock.

Weather conditions, a light breeze and smooth water was to the liking of friends of the defender Eilen, who considered the only hope of retaining the cup was existing. Before the start the Eilen had many friends who felt that it was her duty, but it was the opening acknowledged that if the Harpoon could sail as fast in light weather as she did in the other races that there was no question but what she was the fastest sonder boat on the water.

Skipper Adams of the Harpoon knows Hull bay as no one else, and this is considered a strong factor in the work of the Harpoon, but in spite of this the shore knowledge those experts who have watched the new challenger work are confident that else will be a strong factor in the races in Buzzards Bay in the elimination trials, and will make the American team which will compete against the Spanish sonders in August.

To-day's race was over a triangular ten-mile course and started from the mark in front of the Boston Yacht Club and was to marks off Peddock's Island and Straw's Ferry Hill. This course included both windward and leeward work and was a fine test of the yachts.

Really a race less important for it meant the elimination of some of the boats according to the conditions for winning the Quincy cup the winner must win three races, but at the end of four races all yachts that have not won a race would be eliminated from the contest and the races continued, until a yacht had won three. The Eilen and the Harpoon were the only winners when the race was started and although the Eel, Cima and Sally XI. imbued ahead they would be out of the running.

Before the start it was the opinion of the experts that the single yacht to stand the chance of winning a race would be the Cima, handled by Guy Lowell. The Cima has finished second in all three races and has been but seconds behind the Eilen and Harpoon in the races sailed.

ST. LAWRENCE OUT FOR SECOND RACE

MANCHESTER-BY-THE-SEA, July 27.—conditions has done much to make these little racing matches more popular than they have been at this resort.

Just before the hour for starting the boats both yachts were towed out to Baker's Island and spent much time in trying out. The challenger had on its new set of sails, which were not worn yesterday owing to the severe wetting which they received in Monday's storm.

AMOS RUSIE HAD THE GREATEST SPEED

"Did anybody ever pitch a faster ball than did Amos Rusie?" somebody asked Hughey Fullerton.

"Not yet," said Hughey. "Lots of ball players and baseball writers have talked of 'speed,' but Rusie was the only man who actually had the goods. I have traveled with him when a ball team in my day and Rusie was the one pitcher who was always there with his speed, frightful, hurricane, aeroplane delivery. He had everybody else beaten a mile."

Catcher Fred Payne of the White Sox said:

"Going into a game against a Rusie, I imagine, was the feeling that all

SOUTHPAWS IN BIG DEMAND BY CLUBS

If any one happens to know where a left handed southpaw pitcher is located, who can make good in fast company, just let him give information to some American League manager and get a big bonus for his pains. There is a craze for lefthanders among the big league managers just now, but this applies particularly to the men who lead the American League teams.

The southpaws in the American and National Leagues are having a good year with the bosses of the Ban Johnson organization, having slightly the best of it. Whether it is because the American Leaguers have more puzzling curves or whether the National batsmen are better against left-handers is a question for argument.

At any rate, the recent sensational sale by Manager Jack Dunn of the Baltimore club of Lefty Russell to Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics for $12,000, after spirited bidding in which Manager McGraw of the Giants and Fred Clarke of the Pirates took part, shows the marked value of promising southpaws.

Russell's Remarkable Rise.

Russell's rise has been remarkable. His full name is Clarence Dixon Russell and he was born in Baltimore on July 8, 1890. He was first signed to Baltimore in the Winter of 1909. In the Spring he was let go to the Wilkesbarre club. While there he began to practice throwing the spit ball. Manager Kittridge of Wilkesbarre was overcrowded with pitchers and let the future $12,000 beauty slip through his hands. Russell joined the Hagerstown, Md., team and then developed the spit ball that made him. While with Hagerstown he won forty-one games and lost two, one of which was lost because the catcher couldn't hold the world's spitter.

This season he has been the sensation of the Eastern League and pitcher in the game has attracted more attention than the ballplayer. He has won fourteen and lost seven games for the Orioles. Besides, he has finished in a few games, making a total of twenty-three games worked in. He has not allowed his opponents more than seven hits in any game.

Russell will remain with the Orioles until the close of the Eastern League season, when he will join the Athletics.

Baseball News and Notes.

Why do not some managers get good work out of certain ballplayers? Because players take a liking to some managers and will play their heads off for them, while they won't "make up" to others.

* * *

New York has lost six straight to St. Louis. McGraw's men haven't won a game from Bresnahan's Pepper Boys in the second city this year.

* * *

Charles Adams, Pittsburg's savior in the 1909 world's series, is pitching poor ball. His form reversal is one of the chief causes of the downfall of the Dreyfussands.

* * *

"I don't think much of the sacrifice bunt," says McGraw. "True, it's a pretty safe way of advancing a man. But it always costs you an out. I'd rather take a chance of the man on first getting out at the pitcher's end than going all the way to third on a hit. It doesn't require a hit to bring in a run. Nothing helps the distance. A fly will turn the trick."

* * *

In Cincinnati "Jawn" McGraw celebrated his ninth anniversary as manager of the New York Giants. He took charge of the team July 19, 1902.

* * *

Manager Clark Griffith of the Reds has made a novel proposition. Becoming somewhat peeved at the criticisms of the Cincinnati sporting writers, Jack Ryder, Bill Phelon, Frank Roeseh and Myron Townsend, he has proposed that on a certain day in September the baseball writers and the Reds and the opposing team, and that be, the visiting manager and the umpires will constitute the starting line-up. The writers the pitch and then going all the way to have accepted the challenge.

ATHLETICS NO QUITTERS--MACK

PHILADELPHIA, July 27.—Connie Mack of the Athletics, when told to-day of the story printed in Boston with signed statements by Manager Jennings and Ty Cobb of the Detroit team, calling the Athletics quitters and declaring that Detroit would have walked its down if pushed in the race, said:

"Quitters, are we? Well, let me ask what is the Detroit team. We beat the Tigers last year fourteen games to eight. We were then the team coming from behind and we would have beaten out Detroit for the pennant had not Cobb spiked Barry, which, however, I believe was purely an accident.

"What has Detroit done this year? It has the same team which won the pennant in 1909 and look at its position in this year's race. Why, I look at it every day. The only time they have beaten us in two years was on our last trip here, when we were so badly crippled that we looked like a town lot team.

"Who quit when Detroit was here last? Did they win four games straight? If I remember right, no. I guess not, but we did. Then what have they done in our games with New York and Boston this year? Jennings and Cobb pick Boston to win the pennant. We have beaten Boston eleven times out of fifteen and New York seven out of sixteen. Every one of Boston's four victories over us was by a single run. Is that quitting?

"It is a case of sour grapes and nothing else with Jennings and Cobb. Long ago I gave it to Cobb, good and hard, right in Detroit and when, we left that city I declined to carry the fight any farther and Jennings and Cobb pick Boston to win the pennant. We have beaten Boston eleven times out of fifteen and New York seven out of sixteen. Every one of Boston's four victories over us was by a single run. Is that quitting?

"If it is a case of sour grapes and nothing else with Jennings and Cobb, Long, I'll say I gave it to Cobb, good and hard, right in Detroit and when we left that city I declined to carry the fight any farther and Jennings and Cobb pick Boston to win the pennant. We have been beaten in their games. Wiltse, Bucker, Foxen of Philadelphia have so far had an even break.

"While it is generally admitted that left-hand pitchers have something on men who hail from the south side of the plate, the rule is by no means universal. While Keeler always hit a southpaw better than a right-hander, Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker, Easterly and Eddie Collins, left-handers who are now up in the American League batting records, are all good against southpaws.

TEAMS TO SETTLE SOMERVILLE CHAMP

A handsome cup has been donated by ex-Alderman William H. Ennis of Broadway to be awarded the team attaining the baseball championship of West Somerville for the season of 1910.

The first game for the championship will be played between the Northwesterns and the Brown clubs Saturday afternoon, July 30, at 2:30 o'clock on Broadway field, and a second game Labor Day at 2 p. m. at the same place. These teams are reputed to be the best in the westerly section of the city and both have records to warrant the prediction that the games will be well worth seeing.

M'KINNON IN SHAPE TO FIGHT MARTIN

Bill McKinnon, the Roxbury middleweight, is to battle Jack Martin, also with Terry Martin, which is to be staged at Manchester Friday night, than for any contest that he has been engaged in for several months. He will wind up his training in Revere beach to-night and will leave for Manchester.

Billy Leckie, Joe Woodman, Sam Langford, Kyle Whitney, Jack Twin Sullivan and several other local celebrities will be at the ringside. Whitney and Jack Twin Sullivan will challenge the winner.

HORSE NOTES and SPEEDWAY

Trainer Dennie Nevland has purchased from J. F. Fitzgerald, East Boston, the six-year-old trotting mare Tilly Cline, by Gratton Boy, 2:08. She has no mark, but Ed Bither drove her a mile in 2.27 as a three-year-old. She is said to have been used on the road and speedway. Tilly is a shortly made, well gaited and fast trotter. She was prominent at the matinees at the Charles River speedway, and should trot in 2.15 with a little training.

* * *

Peter B. Bradley's string of trotters are showing up finely in their work at the Readville track. Both Bobby Knight (2:15) and his four-year-old son Becker Grand (2:22¾) are looking fine under the trainer, as are also several youngsters by Border Knight.

* * *

All three of the Apollin youngsters in Arthur Parker's stable at the Readville track can step eighths in 20 seconds.

* * *

Johnny Medlinn (2:17¼), the trotter that took the measure of D. W. Caton's stallion McQuillin (2:17¼) at Montreal, has been a 2:20 trotter for the past two seasons.

* * *

George Leonard of this city has received word from Detroit that Ida Patricia's pacing dictate, Krill, who is to start in the $15,000 Hocomock Stake at the Big Ribbon meeting, arrived there in good shape, as did also the black filly Miss Lilly Bingen. She will also be a starter in the rich event.

* * *

It was only at the last moment that Norman Tellman, the owner of Chilly Direct, decided to ship her to Detroit, but she showed so well at her last workout that it looked as though she would be able to give a good account of herself in the first of the rich futurity races.

* * *

The Readville track will be represented by three youngsters in the Horsemen Futurity, Krill, Chatty Direct and the bay colt Bergen, by Bingara, in Bob Proctor's Stable.

* * *

They are all fast youngsters, but from reports as to the class of the colts that are expected to take the word it will take a 2:10 three-year-old to get into the money.

STRAIGHT TIPS FOR SPORT FANS

HOW SOME OF THOSE FIGHTERS do change their minds. Now there's Bill Papke. When he was here it was Ketchel he wanted to murder, and said the assassin had dodged him from one end of the country to the other. Now take it from me, Bill was only joking, for isn't Ketchel training over in New York now, and Papke if he was wise, would be in the Metropolis forcing him into a match. Some of the clubs would offer all kinds of money for the bout. They do say that Papke is going to find it some work to get down to 158 pounds again, as he is putting on weight all the time.

NOW THERE'S A SENSIBLE LITTLE chap for a fighter in Matty Baldwin. Instead of talking fight all Summer he has settled down for a good rest at New Dorp, Long Island, with his wife and family, and just taking care of himself. Next Fall Matty will begin to mow down the best lightweights in the business, with Ad Wolgast, the champion, as his main object to upset. Just keep your eye on that boy, Boston may have another champion ere long.

AND STILL THEY COME. NOW IT'S Marvin Hart who wants to take up the white man's burden and fight Jack Johnson. The Kentucky heavyweight was handed the title by Jeffries himself on a platter. He loses his claim for the right to fight Johnson on that draw decision with the champion back in 1905. Marvin has set himself down and written to Bill Pierce, who formerly handled him, and wants him to arrange a match with Tommy Burns, winner take all, just to show the public that he can beat the Canuck and should meet Johnson. If Billy Pierce begins to stir things up for Marvin, Mr. Johnson or Mr. Burns will have to pay some attention.

MEL SHEPPARD PLANS TO SMASH RECORDS

Mel Sheppard is about to start the greatest record-breaking campaign known in amateur athletics in this country. The pride of the Pastime Athletic Athletic Club, who gained world's fame at the Olympic meet in London, has kept the athletic fraternity gasping during the last month by his wonderful work on the cinder path. He has changed the figures in no less than four events and he is still in the great form that enabled him to accomplish this feat.

The wise men in the sport thought that "Peerless Mel" would take a rest after the fearful strain necessary for such wholesale record-smashing, and even went so far as to advise him to lay off for a while. But through Sheppard's nervous system has never coursed such a thrill of life. He feels that he will never excel the form he is in right now and that now is the time to fulfil his ambition, which is to change the tables of the A. A. U. record book as much as possible.

"You cannot see a year ahead," said the tall and wiry champion yesterday. "I am liable to fall off a bit and run in time, yards behind the records. I feel confident now that I can get those elusive marks. To delay would be hazardous."

Sheppard has already drawn up a tentative plan for his campaign against Father Time. First, he intends to wipe out the famous old records that Lou E. Myers made back in the 90's. This is the 220-yard mark of 25 seconds, which the ex-pupil of the cinder path hung up in the city in 1881, and the 800-yard run in 1 minute 44 2-5 seconds, which was established in Williamsburg, L. I., in 1882. It is safe to say that Sheppard will eclipse these marks of the old world's champions. They look well within his reach.

Only a few days ago Sheppard reduced Myers's 1000-yard or 2 minutes 13 seconds, made way back in 1881 in this city, to 2 minutes 12 2-5 seconds.

That was a great thing—to beat the time that had stood so long. But now he has set himself a still harder task. He will try to lower the 700-yard and half-mile records, made by Emilio Lunghi, the remarkable young Italian.

On September 6, 1906, the Italian surprised the sporting world by running 700 yards in 1 minute 27 2-5 seconds at Celtic Park, and a few days later, at Montreal, September 15, he put himself at the top of the heap in athletics by breaking what was considered one of the hardest marks to smash, the half-mile run.

Many active athletes thought Charles Kilpatricks' world's record, made in 1897, in the meet between the New York and Long Island Athletic Clubs, would stand for many more years, but the little Italian wonder put the best on record in 1 minute 52 4-5 seconds, a fearful performance for any one now to assail.

But it is this man, of all others, that "Mel" Sheppard is after. He could retire from the sport happy with the half-mile record in his name and practically unbeatable, just as Maxey Long put the quarter-mile record at 47 seconds that in 1900 on the Gutteberg track. Shep wants to be world's champion long in the half-mile. Sheppard will try for the half-mile record at Travers Island in 1895. If he thinks he has a chance to do this he will run the mile at the Metropolitan senior championships.

Lack of Order is One of Woman's Vices

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

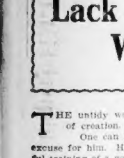
THE untidy woman, the disorderly woman, is a discord in the harmony of creation.

One can be sorry for the untidy man; one can feel there is an excuse for him. He has not been properly taught; he has not had the careful training of a good mother. He has been too busy with the more serious problems of life and too burdened with responsibilities to cultivate neatness and order.

But there is no other duty or problem in life more important for a woman than to be orderly and neat. She is the home-maker. Order is the foundation of a good home.

It is the first stair of the flight which leads up to comfort and content.

Whatever a woman's work or mission, she must first be a homemaker.



ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Confusion a Destroyer of Peace

A woman creates the atmosphere of home. No man can be so disorderly that he can obliterate the character which distinguishes a home ruled over by a neat woman; and no man can be so systematic and powerful that he counteracts the influence of a "hurly-burly" wife, who has not learned Heaven's first law.

However hard he may try, always will there be the air of discomfort in his home. Unless the wife is order-loving, confusion will destroy peace.

Small objects will be missing just when needed—the scissors, the matches, the newspaper and a thousand and one other trifles which are necessary in the daily home life will cause continual irritation and annoyance by being misplaced.

The ash tray will be wrong when the husband looks for it, as he sits down to smoke a quiet cigar; the pack of cards will be missing, when he wants to play a social game; and always the disorderly wife will be sorry, and always will she repeat the small offences against comfort unless she takes a firm stand and resolves that she will overcome her vice, no matter at what cost.

Vice is not too strong a word to use. A disorderly home bespeaks a disorderly mind.

There are homes which jar upon the nerves like wrangling discords of a broken-down piano. In these homes one sees mantels and chimney nooks littered with a confusion of useless objects, tables loaded with books and old newspapers, pipes, cigars, sewing utensils and writing materials all in a jumble; bureaus and chiffoniers covered with objects useful and useless; ragged covered magazines and garments and torn lying on chairs and divans; and clothes presses and chests bursting with clean and soiled garments and moth-eaten things which are only fit for the rag man, and boxes, and packages, and shoes, and slippers.

Better Learned Late Than Never

Invited once to dine with a woman who wore modish gowns and jewelry and drove a motor car, the memory of which obtruded itself afterward, despite the presence of the handsome hostess and cultured host. I beheld an unsightly chiffonier at the head of a stairway which led up from the hall covered with a litter of objects unbeautiful—a half open pasteboard box being one of them.

The very first lesson to instill into the mind of a little girl is the lesson of beautiful order.

Teach her to put away her toys in a neat manner after each hour of play, and give her no others until she has done this duty. It can be made a part of her play by a tactful mother who is willing to interest herself.

A little child can be taught in a few months so that order becomes as natural as breathing.

If order were not taught this beautiful lesson in your youth, teach it to yourself now.

Go through your clothes presses once a week, give away, sell or burn up whatever is not useful to you this season. If there is some garment which may be of use next year, then put it away in a camphor chest out of sight.

Finish every task you begin before you begin another.

Hang away in their proper places, before you sleep, garments you have worn in the evening.

Straighten up tables and bookstands before you retire at night; and after you retire, before you fall asleep say to yourself, "I am Order, System and Neatness."

Ask that power be given you during sleep to grow in these virtues, and never rest until you obtain them.

A Summer Yearning

By CHESTER FIRKENS

SOME time Gwendolyn and I are going to save enough money so that we can spend a whole Summer in the city and do nothing but work.

No wearying rest; no milk from the unispected cows and no noise from the unmitigated chickens. No Summer hotel's tough or tainted meats; no free-for-all dining room tables. Just cheerfulness, a choice of friends and an option on privacy.

For ten years now—ever since we were married—we have been driven to the mountains or the seashore or Europe by sheer terror of pauperism. And every Autumn we vow that we'll never do it again; that we'll scrimp and sacrifice—yes, starve—in order to stay home one summer in a real city, under a real roof, with real food and real comfort.

The hot weather in the country drives us crazy. How we long for the stillness and the pure mountain air of our forty-hundred apartments and the ocean breeze of our electric fans! How we yearn for a sight of some one in clean clothes!

The cold weather in the country curtails. How we mourn for the lost delights of furnace heat and things to do!

But never yet has emancipation from our Summer bondage been achieved. The June flood of Western schoolma'ams and millionaires pouring into the city on their "vacations" compels us to flee for our lives and purses.

What can a poor city man do. The town becomes one great congregation of holiday men. When the aesthetic-seighers arrive regular city people must be done by those the visitors are done by. And yet how gladly we'd stand for the reasonable prices, the tampered taxi-tickers, the complete despoilation of the ticket speculators—if we could only afford it!

We must save more; I cannot stand another three months of tennis, tan shoes and torture. I'm breaking down under the annual ordeal of being nice to horrible-to-the-face-of-it strangers, just because it happens to be Summer boarding house law. I'm sick of sunsets and hops and peek-a-boo girls and the sweet, continuing thought that if I light a cigar we'll all burn to death, as surely as Summer hotels are fire-traps.

No, no! I want silence, safety and solitude; I want the city.

Mirandy on Melancholy

"If dere's one thing dat my sect has got a talent for, hit is for gwine about lookin' lak hit was gwine to hit's own funeral."

By Dorothy Dix

"D" odder night," remarked Miranda, "Mis' Mary Jane was a-readin' to me 'bout dat beautiful actress in Paris, what has got all de people gittin' crazier 'n she has got so much sad and wishful look. De paper say dat she's got dat sorrowful appearance, dat bit is fitten to make you burst out cryin' wit sympathy, if dat foolishness, in de bosom of my own dere tears always on top, an' ready to turn on at a moment's notice.

"I 'got to stand dat in my friends,' I goes on, 'because etiquette don't permit you to git up an' hit a woman what will a flat iron, or rollin' pin, as I would like to do; but I ain't gwine to stand none of dat foolishness, in de bosom of my own family, as long as I'se got de use of my good right arm, an' de things to hit wit holds out.'

"Chic nothin'! It's just plain goose to be melancholy, but women lak to go aroun' with de Day-o'-Judgment look."

"Yassum, dat's what I said to Mis' Jance, an' dey were de words wit de lurk on 'em, for I knowed dat of dere was one thing dat my sect has got a talent for, hit is for gwine about lookin' lak hit was gwine to hit's own funeral, an' I am determined not to add to de mourners.

"Yassum, hit's funny how much women does enjoy bein' miserable, an' de fewest dey can get out of trouble. Sometimes I thinks dat de Lawd is lek a wastin' ammunition when he tries to make a woman happy, for no matter how good a husband he gives her, or what perty clothes, or how much money, or what good health, she just passes by all of dem good things, an' digs right down into de ash heap an' finds sorrow. She routs out sometin' dat she can be awake at night an' worry over, an' den she begins to really have a good time.

"Yassum, de happiest women, dat I'se ever run across, was dem wid a secret grief dat justified 'em in goin' about wid a sad and melancholy look. Dat's de reason dat a woman, what is married to a man dat is always chasin' after evry petticoat dat crosses his path, or one dat is tied up wid a gentleman dat comes home drunk an' beats her, don't scarcely ever git a divorce. She's got a real able-bodied grief, an' hits sech a good thing dat she can't make up her mind to part wid hit.

"When my friends come to me wid dere troubles, an' set here an' wept until dey make puddles on de carpet, I used to try to cheer 'em up, an' plat out to dem how dey could cure dere sorrows; but I don't waste no words on tryin' to comfort 'em now. No way. I done found out dat dey is havin' de time of dere lives bein' purfectly miserable, an' dat nobody but an enemy would be cruel enough to try to separate a woman from her grief.

"Just Natchul Born Weepers"

"Hit didn't take dat French actress to set de fashion in bein' melancholy for women. Women what has got a hang dog cast of countenance, an' dat is natchul born weepers, has always thought themselves stylv, an' looked down on woman what is fat an' cheerful. An' all de odder women has agreed wid 'em.

"Now, dere's Sis Bettry, what ain't never crucked a smile in her life, an' what you couldn't make laugh of you knocked her down wid a poke. She always dresses in mournin', an' drinks black tea, an' her favorite diversion is goin' to funerals; an' of she even dra a woman dat done her duty by her family an' her neighbors, hit is Sis Bettry, an' yit folks looks at her sort of scornfulness; an' when her name was up for de President of de Daughters of Zion, I was de only one dat unanimously voted for her.

"What de matter wid Sis Bettry?" says I, over her husband an' children, but she don't cook 'em nothin' fit to eat,'nor keep dere clothes washed an' mended, an' I'se done noticed dat when de gal knocks at her do' dey don't git nothin' but and sympathy, which ain't stayin' to a hungry stomach.

"An dere Sis Betty what's a little fat, short woman wid a laugh dat you can hear fo' blocks off, an' a face dat looks lak de sun has just riz on it. He dere ever was a woman dat done her duty by her family an' her neighbors, bit is Sis Bettry, an' yit folks looks at her sort of scornfulness; an' when her name was up for de President of de Daughters of Zion, I was de only one dat unanimously voted for her.

"What de matter wid Sis Bettry?" says I, "To be sho', we don't know nothin' ag'inst her,' 'sponse de Sisteren, 'but we've got our suspicion dat she ain't no better dan she ought to be.'

"De Lawd sakes," 'sclaims I, 'what has she done?'

"'She's always a-laughl,' 'spons de Sisteren, 'and she don't 'pear to worry none. Why, jest look how cheerful she is,' and dey drowned dere sheks wid tears over her, lak she done done some scandal.

"Yessum, dat's de way hit goes. Hits jest as much as a woman's character is worth for her to perk up any, an' look lak he was enjoyin' things; an' maybe dat's why you hardly ever hears a respectable woman give me' dam a snicker at a thing, no matter how funny hit is. She knows dat folks is gwine to misconstrue her virtue by de dilinearness of her views.

"But I don't hold wid dem melancholy ladies. I'se find my laugh, an' I'se gwine to have hit, for I'se found dis a pretty good ole worle—especially in de watermillion time."

"I'm gwine to have my laugh for I'se found dis a pretty good ole worle—especially in watermillion time."

CHAPTER XXII.

A Breath from the East

INSPECTOR JACKS was a man who had succeeded in his profession chiefly on account of an average amount of natural astuteness, and also because he was one of those favored persons whose nervous system was a whole and perfect thing. Yet, curiously enough, as he sat in this large, gloomy apartment into which he had been ushered, a room filled with art treasures whose appearance and significance were entirely strange to him, he felt a certain unusual nervousness which he was absolutely unable to understand. He was somewhat instinctive in his likes and dislikes, and from the first he most heartily disliked the room itself—its vague perfumes, its subdued violet coloring, the faces of the grinning idols, which seemed to meet his gaze in every direction, the pictures of those fierce-looking warriors who brandished two-edged swords at him from the walls. They belonged to the period when Japanese art was perhaps in its crudest state, and yet in this uncertain atmosphere they seemed to possess an extraordinary vitality, as though indeed they were preparing at a moment's notice to leap from their frames and annihilate this mysterious product of modern days, who in black clothes and silk hat, unarmed and without physical strength, yet wielded the powers of life and death as surely as they in their time had done.

The detective rose from his seat and walked around the room. He made a show of examining the walls, the brocaded hangings with their wonderful design of faded gold, the ivory statuettes, the black god who sat on his haunches and bared those face seemed carved some dumb but eternal power. Movement was in some respects a solace, but the sound of a hansom bell tinkling outside was a much greater relief. He crossed to the window and looked out over the somewhat silent square. A hurdy-gurdy was playing in front of the house on the club, just visible from where he stood. The newsboys were shouting the details of the commissionaire stood stolidly in his place, standing every now and then his chin down to his lips. A flickering sunlight fell upon the wind-shaken elms, the trees in the square were budding. Inspector Jacks found himself wishing that the perfume of those illness might reach even to where he stood, and help him to forget for a moment that sultry and to him curiously unpleasant room, which all the time became more and more oppressive to him. However, he ordered that he tried even to open the window, but found it an impossible task. The atmosphere seemed to him to be becoming absolutely stifling.

A Gruesome Nightmare

He turned around and walked musingly toward the door. He decided then that this was some sort of gruesome nightmare with which he was afflicted. He was quite certain that in a few minutes he would find himself in his little bedstead with the sweat upon his forehead and a reproachful consciousness of having eaten an indigestible supper. It could not be true that his nerves were shrinking beneath the weight of his body, that the clanging of iron hammers was really smiting the drums of his ears, that the purple of the room was growing red, and that his veins were being strained to bursting. He threw out his arms in a momentary instinct of dreadful struggling consciousness. The idols on the walls seemed to him. Those strangely clad warriors seemed to him now to be looking down upon his discomfiture with a satanic smile, mocking the pygmy who had dared to raise his hand against one so jealously guarded. Then, once more, came the blacksmith's hammers and then silence.

The end of the nightmare was not altogether according to Inspector Jacks' expectations. He found himself in a small dark room, crowded upon a sofa before the open French windows, through which came a gentle suggestion of waving green trees and a pleasanter stream of fresh air. His first impression was a swift, and a sense of relief swept through him when he realized that little pungent, at any rate, had been a dire combination of something having been forced through his lips. A second later, by his side with a glass in his hand. A few feet away, the man whom he had come to visit was looking down upon him with an expression of grave concern in his kindly face.

"You are better, I trust, sir? Prince Maliva said.

"I am better," Inspector Jacks muttered. "I don't know—I can't imagine what has pened to me."

"You have not been feeling quite well perhaps, this morning, the Prince said soothingly. "It is a run down, no doubt. Your profession—I gather from your card, Inspector Jacks—is a most trying and arduous one. I came into the room and found you lying upon your back, gasping for breath."

Inspector Jacks was making a swift review of the past. He remembered that the man-servant was holding was empty, and then a dire recollection of something having been forced through his lips. Almost secretly, by his side with a glass in his hand.

"I was absolutely and entirely well," he declared stoutly, "both when I left home this morning and when I entered this room to wait for you. I don't know what it was that came over me." He continued doubtfully, "but the atmosphere seemed suddenly to become unbearable."

Prince Maliva nodded understandingly.

"Those idols are quite valuable," he admitted. "So many of my hangings in the room have been wrapped in spices to preserve them, and my people burn joss-sticks there occasionally. Some of us, too," he concluded, "are very susceptible to strange odors. I should imagine, perhaps, that you are one of them."

Inspector Jacks shook his head.

In the Hands of the Japanese

"I call myself a strong man," he said, "and I confess I am surprised that any thing of the sort would have happened to me."

"I shouldn't worry about it," the Prince said genially. "Have your doctor. If you like, but I have known many people, perfectly healthy, affected in the same way. I shouldn't advise you to have a word with me. Do you feel well enough to enter upon your business now, or would you prefer to make another appointment?"

"I am very much interested to meet you, Mr. Inspector," he remarked, with a glance at the card which he was still holding in his fingers. "I have studied very many of your English methods during my stay over here with much interest, but it has not been my fortune to have come into touch at all with your police system. Sir Francis Denham, your chief, I believe, has invited me several times to Scotland Yard, but I have always meant to avail myself of his kindness. You come to do, I suppose, the same?"

The Inspector shook his head.

"Not exactly, Prince," he said, "is a little more serious."

Prince Maliva raised his eyebrows.

"Indeed?" he said. "Then whatever it is, let us hear it. I trust that I have not in any way offended the susceptibilities of your law?"

Inspector Jacks hesitated. After all, his was not so easy a task.

"Not exactly, sir," he replied, "my errand is not in any way a pleasant one, and I should be glad to avoid it if I could, but I am in a position of bringing any annoyance upon you personally, I shall certainly be most highly esteemed. At the same time there are certain duties in connection with my every-day life which I cannot ignore. In a word, sir, I have come to inform you that I have a great brother in the country, but over [illegible] all stand equal in the sight of the law. I am here to arrest you."

"That is excellent," the Prince said, "Please proceed. Only, I pray you, that I do not wish to stand for a single moment longer than is necessary. Be seated, I ever it may be. Let me hear just what you have to say. Although I were an ordinary dweller here. While I am in England, I am a subject of his Majesty." he added with a smile, "I am subject to your laws and I do my best to obey them."

"It has fallen to my lot," Inspector Jacks said, "to take charge of the investigations following upon the murder of a man named Hamilton Fynes, who was killed on his way from Liverpool to London, and to arrest the murderer."

The Prince inclined his head.

"I believe," he said amiably, "that I remember hearing the matter spoken of by one of my friends. Mr. Lavelle, I recollect, at a recent dinner-party. He is the extraordinary exaggerated value people in this country seem to attach to human life, as compared to us Orientals. But pray proceed, Mr. Inspector. I am all attention." The Prince continued courteously. "The investigation, I am sure, is in most able hands."

"The Murderer Is a Jap"

"You are very kind, sir," said the inspector. "I do my best, but I might admit to you that I have found such a case so difficult to grasp. Our methods perhaps are slow, but they are in a sense, sure. At any rate, they are our own, and we hope before long to secure the criminal. That is not at all my task."

The Prince bowed. This time he made no response.

"The evidence which I have collected from various sources," Inspector Jacks continued, "leads me to believe that the person who committed this murder was a foreigner."

"What you call an alien," the Prince suggested. "There is much discussion, I gather, concerning their presence in this country nowadays."

"The evidence which I possess," the detective proceeded, "points to the murderer belonging to the same nationality as Your Highness."

(To Be Continued Tomorrow)

The Man Who Is Down

By ARLETTA B. CANFIELD

HIT him again. He's down.

This is the sentiment usually applied to the unfortunate. If we spent as much time in building up as we do in tearing down we'd be successful builders indeed.

What chance does a shabbily dressed man or woman stand to get a "job" in any sort of a reputable establishment? Will the man who does the employing cast a look of sympathy on him and say, "Come in and tell me your story?"

He will not. One look at the shabbily dressed stranger will keep him from even reading the letters he may have brought. A gruff "Don't want anybody," will be all that is needed to finish the scene.

He might have found out that the man had been ill and near to the door from which he came, only to be told to get out of the way by something to eat, let alone clothes.

What does the man inside the office know about it? He does not care. Is the one thought. "We don't want a man that looks like that. If he's anything of a worthless lot, he'll never do. We don't have work," is sufficient for his view.

Now there is no business man on busy that he cannot take a moment to look at an applicant and to listen to his story if he needs somebody. He may find a jewel among the weed crop that comes to his door.

Nobody knows the gratitude of the man or woman who has been turned down so often as to produce the nausea that nothing can subside, when they are greeted by a pleasant look and granted a respectful hearing, even if they be refused. It takes but a minute and the minute is well spent.

Things turn around so much in this world. What is on top today is under beneath, sometimes way down underneath, to-morrow, and the seemingly worthless is the treasure.

While this is an unusual occurrence, yet it is true that you can't keep a good man down, and that if he has the right grit and backbone he may climb any way somewhere; so it often happens that he gets to his place in life before you do, and may have you influence there.

At any rate, courtesy doesn't hurt anybody, and it may help many. It may brighten the prospect for one who is already clothed in the shadows. It may give hope where it has not been known in a long time. It may call back to you its blessings in an unexpected way.

You don't think that just because the world has need of a few more pretty things you be does not deserve something better, and you know in that something he can't get without your help.

You don't think that because a man is down to-day he is going to be further down to-morrow, and give him a kick by way of passing the time of day.

If he's the right sort he'll be up above you before he dies and be able to treat you the same way if he desires. Life is made up of ups and downs, and when you are at your very lowest look for the rise in the wheel that will take you to the pinnacle of your sphere. And let us not forget that a kindness to another who needs it will come back to us some day bearing its reward.

Three Women---Which?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THREE women sat opposite me in the street car. As I watched them I said to myself: "If I were a marrying man and obliged to marry one of you three women, I wonder which one I would choose?" I'm glad I'm not which one I ought to choose, but the question is, which one would I choose."

They were absolutely unlike. One was a wholesome, good-looking woman, not especially smart nor especially dull, just an everyday, sweet-souled woman, I should say.

The second was a gypsy of a woman, flashing eyes, with gleams of passion in their dark depths, smiting, debonair, a challenge in every glance. A woman of whose presence no man could be unconscious.

The third was exemely pretty, in a helpless, baby way, rather delicate looking, with a mouth which, unless I am much mistaken, will eventually droop at the corners.

Now, by which one of those three women do you think the ordinary man would be most attracted? All three were good looking. The normal woman would prefer the best wife. She might carry him to no dizzy heights of bliss, such as the gypsy woman would, nor possess his sense of protectiveness, such a the baby woman would, but for lifelong sweet companionship and equality she would be the best of the three.

The Gypsy Type of Woman

The gypsy type of woman is not satisfied with the range of one man. The love of conquest is born in her, and once she has conquered, the novelty of victory soon wears off, and she sighs for fresh conquests.

And the ordinary, everyday man who is striving to make a place for himself in the world gazes with dismay at this strange bird of paradise, who will not build her nest in his roof tree, but built for a stay-at-home robin mate, not to a brilliant flyer.

She bewitched him, and he was essentially happy when he won her, and then followed a period of bliss unutterable, but men must work, and the practical side of life takes its toll.

The gypsy realizes that. But she must have excitement and attention, and if her husband cannot give it to her she looks elsewhere for it.

The baby type of woman is even more detestable to a man than the gypsy. She is cloying sweet, and smothers every particle of originality in a man. He fails in love with her because she is so sweet and helpless, and he longs to take care of her, poor little thing. All through their honeymoon he pets her and treats her as though she were the baby she looks. After marriage, when he is eager to settle down and work for his lovely possession, he finds that he has assumed a burden that will grow heavier with every succeeding year. She is the type of woman who, after the arrival of the first baby, considers herself a martyr and a semi-invalid.

Her Husband a Slave

Her baby mouth droops at the corners, and lines of peevishness mar the soft beauty of her face. Every husband becomes a patient slave to her whims and fancies, and he is a tried looking old man years before his time.

After the wholesome, sensible, sweet-souled woman, the mate whom God and nature intended for him, what of her? The gypsy will bewitch him out of his senses and the baby woman will entangle him and he will pass his mate by without the slightest recognition of her. She is the woman in whom the possibilities of wife and motherhood lie deep and strong, the woman whose true, steadfast love and companionship can make a heaven of a man's life.

Oh, man, man! How can you be so blind? For I know that the average man, had he been in the street car that day, would have felt his pulse leap at sight of the gypsy, and his tenderness at sight of the baby woman, and if he glanced at the good time at the third he would have classified her as "a good sort of woman" and never have a thought of her again.

TO-DAY'S BEST STORY

THE patrimonial estate Miss Antiline's dressing room as that young lady sat before the glass putting on the last few dabs of powder.

"Oh, Miss Antiline," she said, "both them young gents you're engaged to are in the drawing room, and they seem to have found out as you've been false to both, and it looks as if there's going to be a row."

"Goodness me, Matilda!" exclaimed the startled fair one. "What ever shall I do?"

Matilda thought for a moment, and then answered: "I know, miss. I'll go and tell them cook's crying because you're because your father's lost all his money, and you'll be in soon. That'll be true, she stays really loves you, and he will be the one to marry."

Matilda departed, and in a short time returned with a black look on her face.

"Well," inquired the young lady eagerly "what's up?"

"Please, miss," returned the maid, "they've both bolted!"

FRECKLES

July Worst Month for This Trouble. How to Remove Easily.

There's a reason why nearly everybody freckles in July, but happily there is also a cure for them, say Dunkler, and no one need stay freckled. Simply get one ounce of orange blossom lotion from Houghton & Dutton and apply a little of it night and in the morning you will find that one of the worst tasks to diagnose, the removal of freckles, has been made easy. It is the time to be rid of them, for they will not remain long after the first day of summer, and spoil an otherwise beautiful complexion. Beware lack of ethics foils.

QUIET REIGNS IN CIRCLE OF FASHIONABLES

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

"What's everybody doing any way?" asked a cool, contented looking Miss who had just motored in from her country home to do some shopping when I met her on Boylston street. "I haven't seen any one since before we left on our cruise two weeks ago. We only returned yesterday," she continued.

But I could think of nothing to tell her. Most of the fashionables, like herself are spending their time on the water while those who remain on shore are keeping as quiet as possible this hot weather. There is always more or less unrest and moving about in search of their elusive happiness, but there is little else just now to satisfy our restless aristocrats.

The Reverend Doctor George R. Bedell, await Instruction. More than 100 men speaking recently before the Unitarian ladies of the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, attitute on the Isle of Shoals on the topic officers of the Boys' Brigade, High School "What is a Good Boy?" said: Cadets, former members of the regular

"Let the boy read Dick Turpin stories and surrender himself at times to the life of the woods. Some people would not let a boy read even "Treasure Island," but make a perfect lady out of him as soon as possible.

"We sometimes think of boys as of two tribes of Arabs, among one of whom the Bedouins 'skrik' and 'escapades' which in the other tribe are called 'criminal offences.'

"The result seems to be somewhat the same. We think that boys are kindly evil and the theory that they are wholly angelic.

The chief necessity of ample playgrounds must be everywhere emphasized.

"The heart of the matter is in the great need of sympathetic relations with boys of the right sort. Those who have not found themselves. With this sympathy and help boys can climb out of the evil into restful manhood and citizenship. Let us put more sunshine into their lives."

Will Elect in December.

In preaching the doctrine that every boy should be permitted to surrender himself at times to the life of the woods, Dr. Bedell restates the echoing idea of Ernest Thompson Seton with midcircle the American Boy Scout movement, now growing so rapidly in the New England States. Thompson Seton put it this way:

"Something to do, something to think about, something to enjoy in the woods, with a boy always in character-building, for manhood, not scholarship, is the first aim of education."

Making practical the application for the first time on a large scale of this principle, Lieutenant-General Sir Robert S. S. Baden-Powell, K. C. B., expresses it thus:

"Easier a boy in the white heat of enthusiasm and mould his character."

If it were possible for the parents of New England, Sunday School teachers, teachers in the public schools, employers and everybody who has to do with boys to spend a week at the New England Headquarters of the American Boy Scout movement at No. 5 Bromfield street, each would come overwhelming proof of the truth of the foregoing preachments.

Splendid are the older organizations for boys now existing in New England, nonetheless not their achievements of the past and still yet none has attempted to solve the boy problem with the basic principle of "life in the woods." The American Boy Scout movement is here to fill that need.

Thousands of Applicants.

The response from the boys of New England has been inspiring.

"Tell me how I can be a scout," has been heard hundreds of times in the last four weeks at the New England Headquarters. Several thousand applicants for membership in the scout movement are registered at the New England Headquarters and

BRIDE HUNTS $10,000 BAIL FOR MARSHALL

The bride of John R. Marshall, the alleged farm gang money spent most of her honeymoon time to-day strolling among her friends, trying to get cash to release her husband from the Charles Street Jail, where he was locked up in default of a $10,000 bail bond. Mrs. Marshall stuck by her husband up to the moment he was carried to jail. Immediately after she started out to get together the necessary bail.

Mrs. Marshall was known as Mrs. Nellie Penn and Miss Eleanor Holiday. She was married to Marshall Monday night, in Philadelphia.

Upon receiving word of Marshall's arrest, United States District Attorney Asa P. French, who went abroad a month ago with his son, sailed for home, and is now on his way to Boston, ready to prosecute the case as vigorously as he did that against William J. "Big Billy Kelliher. He is expected to arrive Friday.

It is said that Marshall's attorney, Lawyer Edward C. McManus of Natick, will probably file a demurrer to which the prosecution would be asked to make more specific the offences charged in the indictment.

PROBE CHARGE NURSES GAVE "DOPE" TO SICK

Following charges of graft, and "doping" of patients "to get them out of the way," a committee of investigation has been appointed to probe the consumptives camp, and tuberculosis hospital at North Cambridge.

The committee is made up of Councilmen Coleman, Murphy, Nellington and Shalin of the Cambridge Common Council and several members of the Board of Aldermen. The probe will be started at once.

Councilman Murphy brought the charges against the camp and hospital. He declared he could "convict five witnesses to testify to the alleged graft and "doping." Charges were also made against some of the hospital officials.

Councilman Murphy stated that nurses had been paid at the institution who had not worked for many weeks, and he made the accusation that nurses had given "dope" to the patients when they wished to get them out of the way.

Patients very ill, it is charged, did not get the medicine they required, except until after long delay. It was claimed, too, that patients were only half fed at times.

The prolonged absence of the head physician and head nurse was another matter that called forth censure from the councilman.

O'MEARA ADMITS HE LACKS POLICE

I shall be glad to lay before you the need of increased police protection in Dorchester; in East Boston, South Boston and Charlestown, which are not only populous, but include vast railroad, commercial and steamship properties.

I mention these sections in particular because I hear constantly from their citizens and citizens' associations of the well founded need of more policemen.

I have not mentioned certain parts of the city which must be provided with police in the public interest, even though the inhabitants do not call for them.

Neither have I laid stress upon the many crossings now unprotected, which should have policemen, nor the needs of that part of the city where there are hundreds of closed houses representing many millions of dollars.—Commissioner O'Meara in his letter to Mayor Fitzgerald.

SEA SERPENT NOW OFF LYNN

LYNN, July 27.—Miss Margaret F. Donovan, daughter of Daniel A. Donovan, a shoe manufacturer, is interesting her girl friends with the tale of how she saw a sea serpent some twenty feet long and of horrible mien, just off Egg Rock Light recently.

Miss Donovan was sitting on the veranda of her home, which is situated on the Lynn Shore Drive, when she noticed something writhing in the water quite a distance from shore. Procuring a telescope she discovered it was neither a shark, porpoise nor whale, but a long, slimy creature with a head and shoulder appearance. Her father, also noticed the creature over and came to the conclusion it must be a species of sea serpent.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

Thomas W. Lawson in a letter issued to those who, after watching the market go to either extreme, make a solemn resolution to "load up" the next time the market touches bottom, says:

"There is a next time here again. To use the language of those enterprising brokers, Messrs. Mott & Jeffs, 'the ghost of Mike don't miss it again.' Don't let that Machiavellian-phrased pickpocket, the next fool you run into taking that line of lingo to continue its performance of the past with success indefinitely. Don't let it go run into thinking that the world is again sending to us one.

The bad features of the steel report have been fully discounted. The surprise although is the increase of $5,000,000 in net earnings over the previous quarter will undoubtedly be taken advantage of by the people to induce a temporary rally in the stock market. In fact, the interest of the buyers at the bottom prices was such as to suggest that an aggressive attempt was already being made to force the issue.

The liquidation in the last few market sessions has come from all over the country. The business in the early part of last week came principally from the Northwest and from Canada and was of a particularly bearish character. Reports of damage to corn and cotton, particularly to corn, have brought selling orders from the corn sections and to a lesser extent from the South. The heaviest liquidation attributable to the reports of crop damage there has been a steady stream of selling by investors all over the country.

It is not necessary to imagine any new calamity projected for the Pearson syndicate beyond the interesting one of the corn and the well known bad physical condition of the Missouri Pacific road. Although Missouri Pacific has not paid dividends on its stock since January, 1908, the realized of the Iron Mountain, which is the backbone of the system, shows an unusual degree of improvement. All the recent talk of resuming dividends on Missouri Pacific was nonsense or worse. The company will spend at least $20,000,000 on improvements before it can think of paying the little

As a general proposition it is a well-known fact and one that may be easily established at the banks that the brokerage houses are longer of money than of stocks. For that reason some rumors of trouble among brokerage houses are taken seriously in some of the banks.

HIGHER STOCK PRICES TO-DAY

A reversal of the pessimistic sentiment of the past week occurred at the opening of the stock market today due to the unexpected size showing of earnings in the quarterly report of the United States Steel Corporation, and prices started from 1 to 4 points higher than yesterday's close. There was a much better demand for securities than there has been for some little time and buying was fairly active.

The bear operators, however, refused to consider that the change in sentiment would prove of lasting quality, and did not make any attempt to cover their short contracts on the advance. This proved the weak element in the situation.

Buying of Union Pacific and the leading railroad shares was good. New York Central opened up ½ points at 107⅞; Chesapeake & Ohio was up 1¼, some amount Northern Pacific made a gain of 1¼ points on fairly good demand.

Rock Island preferred proved a weak feature. It opened with apparent strength, but lost the initial gain of two points within a short time. Missouri Pacific was up three points and held the gain well.

DEATH IN THE CHAIR DELAYED BY PRAYER

AUBURN, N. Y., July 27.—William Gibson was to have died in the electric chair today. He was called to his doom while kneeling in prayer in his cell, and there was another delay as he was ordered until the prayer was finished. Gilbert died calmly and bravely. GLIDDEN TROPHY FIGHT IN COURT

By J. C. KERRISON.

At last the Glidden trophy has gotten into the courts, and for some time the question of the ownership of this blue-ribbon trophy will remain in doubt. H. O. Smith, entrant of the Premier car, which was first awarded the trophy and later disqualified, the trophy being awarded to the Chalmers, is seeking an injunction restraining the A. A. A. and the members of its contest board from delivering the cup to the Chalmers Motor Company after Nov. 1, after having passed upon the protest filed with him.

The case has been, nor will it be, charged or intimated by any one that the entrants of the Premier car were guilty of any misconduct or that any deception or charge, practice was attempted by any one or either of them. On the contrary, their fair faith is acknowledged, if the cars for any reason were not eligible, it was the duty of the technical committee to have so advised the entrants and disqualified the cars before the start of the contest.

"No fault was found with the conduct of the drivers of the Premier cars during the contest, nor has even a suggestion been made that they are either of them failed to comply with the letter and the spirit of the rules governing the contest. The winning Premier not only was so driven, but in addition it was called upon to carry different officials of the tour, including the pilot, ten of the sixteen running days of the contest, on account of the official car becoming incapacitated. No allowance for time was made or asked, for the Premiers both finished in good physical condition and were driven to Indianapolis under their own power after being released by the technical committee. There is no other hand, the Premier No. 1, which was officially pronounced the winner, not only disfigured with the best road score of any car, but it has also the best combined road and mechanical score under the rules.

"It is to be regretted that an appeal to the courts was necessary, but I am confident that the result of the hearing upon the merits of the pending litigation will amply justify the course I have adopted."

GAS EMPLOYES GET ANOTHER DIVIDEND

Continued good results from the system of profit-sharing among its employes, as instituted by the Boston Consolidated Gas Company in 1906, is shown in the company's latest report, stating a dividend of 5 per cent. to the employes on their earnings, and giving evidences of increased efficiency and high standard of service, both by the employes and the company to its patrons. The system, one by which especially able and devoted employes are given a dividend on their yearly earnings, equal to that paid on stock, and this sum is invested in preferred stock in the company, thus making the employe a stockholder.

Man Still Needs Some Apparently Useless Animals to Preserve Nature's Mysterious Balance

But Man Does Not Need and Should Destroy the Howling, Yowling, Disease-Spreading Cats and Dogs in Big Cities

Copyright, 1910, by the American-Journal-Examiner.

We have told you and we repeat that cats SPREAD DISEASE; cause at least one-half the cases of diphtheria among children. Disease germs of all kinds cling to their fur—and the children gather the germs, as they carry the cats about in their arms.

Besides spreading disease, cats disturb the rest of those that are ill. No one knows what suffering the half-wild, half-starved, absolutely unnecessary cats have caused in great cities by their all-night howling.

There are abnormal sentimentalists that pour out upon cats and other animals an affection that might be better used.

Let those individuals HAVE their cat or dog of the present if they insist upon it. But let them be careful, vigilant guardians of their animal nuisances.

There is no reason why the errant, sentimental, pleasure-loving cat of a decorous but disappointed old maid should keep five hundred men, women and children awake night after night.

Every cat should wear a collar with the name and address of the cat-owning citizen. Every cat caught away from the house or the fond embrace of the owner should be destroyed—unless the owner is willing to pay a good-sized fine for having a nuisance at large.

And every cat, like every dog, should pay a good round annual license—the money to go to some children's hospital.

If cats had to pay a yearly license, those that really LOVE cats could enjoy the society of their loved ones, and the unhappy, starving, fighting, howling cats without loving owners could go to THEIR long rest—and let others rest.

A generous-hearted goose wants to know if this newspaper is the bitter, cruel enemy of helpless, harmless animals and wants to see them all abolished.

Our answer is a conservative NO.

We should be glad to see the last cat stuffed on some old lady's mantelpiece with a little bunch of artificial flowers on either side.

We should like to see a law against keeping dogs in cities, and against keeping any dogs of the sort that bite and frighten children.

But we would NOT abolish all animals—for it is very dangerous interfering with nature's plans—until you have studied things very carefully.

Do you know of the Western States that offered a bounty for every coyote killed? The coyotes, sneaking, ugly, apparently useless beasts, were killing the sheep. They had killed perhaps fifty thousand dollars' worth of sheep in the State.

The bounty on coyote scalps produced results. Soon the coyotes had vanished.

But the farmers were not as happy as they had hoped to be.

Immediately the alfalfa fields grew bare. Millions of field mice gnawed away the alfalfa pastures and hay fields until where the coyotes had destroyed fifty thousand dollars' worth of sheep meat, the field mice destroyed millions of dollars' worth of alfalfa.

The abused coyotes, unobtrusively, without getting any thanks, had been killing off the field mice, eating thousands of the mice daily. When the coyotes were killed the mice thrived. Now those Western farmers know that before you wipe out the coyotes you must be sure that you know the coyotes are REALLY useless.

The same thing happened in California on a smaller scale, when a bounty on coyotes caused the coyotes to vanish and the jack rabbits—that had been coyote food—to multiply and wipe away miles of wheat fields.

It is a dangerous thing for a man to be too drastic in his effort to make over Nature. She is a slow, deliberate old lady, and you must not hurry her.

But we repeat that cats SHOULD go, and howling, biting, degrading dogs should diminish in numbers.

If you saw your child with a piece of vile carrion pressed against its face, you would shudder.

Then drive out the dog or cat that seeks the carrion, gathers the germs, and is then pressed against the faces of your children in their play.

Many good people have protested against our short talk on disease-spreading cats.

And it offended estimable old ladies who love their cats and have little else to love.

We invite the friends of cats and those who think there is no harm in letting children play with disease-carrying animals to read the following letter:

Mr. Editor—Reading in the November Magazine that "rats are to blame for the spread of contagious diseases, and the opportunity for so doing infinitely greater with cats," recalled to my mind a scene I witnessed a few years ago. A small chicken of a neighbor of mine sickened and died. Before death its head and throat became a mass of pus-filled sores. Instead of burying the diseased carcass, the man carelessly threw it over into a vacant lot. A few days later, from my sitting-room window, I saw the pet cat of another neighbor eat all but the feathers of that disgusting looking diseased dead fowl. Then Mr. Puss performed his ablutions. He sat up and smeared his "pretty looking fur" all over with that same little mouth that had eaten all of those pus-filled sores. After getting nice and clean (?) he went home, was taken into the arms of his mistress, and his germ-laden fur pressed against her mouth and cheek. And people wonder at the spread of sickness.

In this city the milkman in his morning rounds often puts the milk and cream (bottled) on an outside window ledge. My neighbor, next door, has a porch beneath the window she uses. One morning their servant saw through the window a cat on the sill licking the tops of their bottles. In a few days the whole family was suddenly unaccountably affected with a disagreeable throat disease. I believe now that cat left disease germs on the milk bottles. At any rate, there is food for reflection in the above remarks. Cats may be the cause of far too many of the prevailing diseases. I do pity helpless little babies who are unable to prevent their mouths being cat-licked.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES OF Overdoing It

"WINIFRED BLACK"

By Winifred Black

A WOMAN jumped off the train to catch her husband out in Colorado the other day. The husband was trying to escape, but he didn't succeed.

Poor wretch! don't blame him for trying to get away!

Any woman who will run after a man who wants to get away from her explains by that very action to all inquiring friends her husband's distaste for her society.

When I first went away to boarding school I saw a very pretty girl sitting just ahead of me in the classroom.

She was a beauty—great violet eyes and a cloud of shining bronze hair. She was clever, too. Always near the head of the class, and she could dance like a wave in the sunshine, and she could sing like a sandy mocking bird. Painted rather well, too. And was great at private theatricals.

I fell in love with her at first sight, just as every other stranger always did.

By the end of the week we were bosom friends. She knew all my secrets and I knew all hers. She had read my diary and I read her letters from home. We traded hair ribbons and slippers, and passed our leisure hours walking with our arms around each other's waist.

Then I began to notice that there never seemed to be time for anything but Eliane. The beauty's name was Eliane. She pouted if I spoke to one of the other girls on the most trivial matter. She was "mad" if I took too long to read my letters from home. She wanted me to come and room with her and promise never to have any other friend as long as I lived but her.

In about ten days I would have given every hair ribbon and every pair of slippers I ever hoped to have to get rid of her. She haunted me like some sickly shadow. I couldn't eat, I couldn't practice, I couldn't read, I couldn't breathe without Eliane. Finally I fell ill, and the doctor wouldn't let her in the room. When I recovered Eliane had a new victim, and I was free.

I wonder if that woman who jumped off a moving train to be with the man who wanted to get rid of her is Eliane. It sounds awfully like her.

The prettiest, cleverest, most fascinating woman in the world can't afford to make herself too plenty, as the girls used to say of Eliane.

Poor Eliane! I suppose she's wondering yet why people fall out of love with her as quickly as they fall in.

Her Latest Want

By JAMES RAVENSCROFT

SHE kissed him, long and tenderly,
And hugged him tightly, too,
And murmured: "Um-hm-h, I love
You so,
You dear great big boy, you!"
Full well he knew that he was due
To be here's sacrifice,
And to himself he straightway said:
"I wonder what's the price?"

SHE laid her slender, lily hands
Upon his shoulders big,
And proudly held him off, arm's length;
He thought: "Here's where I dig.
Now, isn't this just frenzied bliss?
Oh, you sweet robber thing!
I wonder if you'll ask me for Another diamond ring?"

SHE gazed into the gray of his
Keen, money-seeing eyes,
And said: "You're just the only man,
So good and brave and wise.
You look so fine and you're all mine,
I couldn't live without you, dear,
For you're my very life."

HER fingers fondly mussed his hair;
She leaned into his arms:
"You're going some this time," he mused,
"But you've sure got the charms.
I'll bet a dime you'll ask this time
For a palatial yacht."
Well, fire away, you know you can
Have anything I've got."

AND then he laughed and spoke right out.
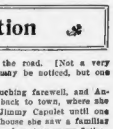
"Come on, what is it, kid?
Pearls, diamonds, motor car or yacht?
I'm on, now; what's the bid?"
She looked most sweet enough to eat
As rapturously she sighed,
And threw her arms around his neck;
"You darling man!" she cried.



SHE took his face between her hands;
He bent his head to hear
And then she "a-hem'd" fetchingly.
And whispered in his ear.
Across his face there swept space
A look as if of pain.
But this is what she said to him:
"I want an aeroplane."

Hot Weather Fiction

By WEX JONES

ANNABELLE LEE did not enjoy herself much in the country. In fact, she thought the country was insufferably dull. Unlike some people, she couldn't find anything entertaining in a cow, and she didn't care enough about besties or caterpillars to get an exciting shock when one would be discovered clinging to her skirt. As for straw rides, Annabelle declared that the same experience could be had by taking a trip in a belt line horse car.

So, looking around for amusement, Annabelle noticed the tall young man who appeared to be a sort of facetotum in the summer "cottage" [("strictly country chicken and eggs"—from the country boarder enough, but with Boston]. James Kapuler was the young man's name, and he drove the team on the straw rides and took visitors out on the lake in the cottage's flat-bottomed boats, and did other stunts of a like nature.

"It would be a good thing to wake up that young man," thought Annabelle, and she straightway proceed to act upon the thought.

By the time the young Capulet had taught Annabelle to row—which took a long time, as she was already an expert and therefore critical—the girl thought that perhaps she had gone too far with her flirtation with the country heart, and when the time came for parting she felt very sorry she had crushed this poor country lad's heart, as a motor truck might crush a chicken crossing the road. [Not a very poetic simile. It may be noticed, but one full of force.]

They had a touching farewell, and Annabelle Lee went back to town, where she forgot all about Jimmy Capulet until one day in a friend's house she saw a familiar figure. A student of contemporary fiction, Annabelle at once thought: "Hiest if that cottage boy isn't cohosnsed with a hopeless pauper and has fetched one home. He must go and squelch him for good."

So Annabelle went and spoke to James, who evidently tried hard to think who she might be, but just as evidently couldn't remember her.

Annabelle said something about Sweetbrier Cottage, and Capulet's face cleared. "I thought you might be one of them," he said. "That was the toughest job I ever had, but I needed the money then, and the Cottage paid me well. But never again; I couldn't stand another season of rough-ments."

Moral: No one reads morals in hot weather. Why doesn't some one get out a book with just the title page—say "Dolly Deane's Decision"—and the last sentence—"Dolly Deane had made her decision. The End"—with all the other pages blank? Would save hammock readers a lot of trouble—and be a better story than most. Query: Why must "The End" be printed on the last page? Does the author fear the reader will think the ads. on the back cover are part of the story?

Plea for U. S. Soldiers

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

It is positively ridiculous to send men out under the burning rays of tropical suns to test their strength and endurance like so many animals as one may see in the Philippine Islands, as well as in Hawaii. Conditions which exist in time of peace are those which give soldiers and marines as much exercise as they need for active service. It can be recalled that previous to the Spanish-American War, and even to the Philippine insurrection and the Chinese Boxer trouble, there was no marching under tropical suns, 100 degrees, sweltering, gasping in the dust for air and such, but the troops were over-exercised as they were needed in the aforesaid cases. The drills prescribed are enough to keep any men in condition for "wars," which Uncle Sam need not worry over, and it is inhumane for officers of high rank, enjoying the luxuries of life, holding down swivel chairs from one end of the year to another, to imagine these things and take the time to remove a lot of cheap cigar from their mouths to dictate such orders which bring misery to hundreds of men.

The writer, who has marched under all kinds of adverse conditions, has found all kinds of advice whatever, unless men it to be of no use whatever, unless men are kept continuously in the field under the circumstances which govern wars and insurrections. Of course it is impractical to keep men in the field all of the time, and marches from one month to another merely tend to make a fine effect when he receives his discharge papers. It also causes more than a few not to re-enlist. Practice marches were the cause of many army desertions, and will always be the cause of desertions. It is nothing more than testing a man's endurance power, and any intelligent man can conceive of the misery attending them. It will be found that practice marches were "no use for active service. If can be recalled that very old officers, who have had very little or no fighting in the Philippine Islands here to try to compare the marching in '61 to the present date. The Marine Corps never did make a practice of such marches until three or four years ago and that is one organization that did enlist the best of our young men. Through the neglect of several "contract doctors," men were enlisted with defects, and for that piece of ignorance, men are being "biked" up mountains and down mountains. If they march twenty miles to-day they will have to make twenty-five to-morrow, and if they make twenty-five then, why they will have to make thirty, and so on, to the ruination of the United States service. It is hoped that some one who has influence will read this through twice before he dismisses it from memory, and try to work up a little sympathy for the much "battered" enlisted men. These marches have caused the writer to go into business and not "rough" again, and perhaps will cause a number of others to do the same.

Yours truly, HOY MARKLEY.
